SEEK YOUTH IN CASE OF GIRL WHO SHOT SELF

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 3.—Search was made to-day for a young man in this city who may be able to throw some light on the attempt made to kill herself by Miss Ruth Olney, nineteen years old, who fired a bullet into her breast in the building of the Young Women's Christian Association.

The young woman is in a precarious condition to-day at the Rhode Island Hospital. She had been employed in a Providence store for a month. She is the daughter of George Olney, a deacon in the Graniteville Baptist Church. She is a fine musician and her father wanted her to educate herself so that she might teach music.

Seek Young Man.

Just as the young women in Boston's association were thrown into a panic when they learned that Avis Linnell was dead through poison a couple of months ago, so were the 160 girls excited when the sound of Miss Olney's pistol rang through the building at eight o'clock last night. When the girl was asked about her friends she made this significant statement:

"They will know to-morrow morning when they see the paper and then they'll suffer just as much as I have suffered."

A young man who was paying attention to Miss Olney is being looked for to-day as an avenue of information. Mrs. Cynthia Van Trump, a sister of the young woman, said:

"There is more behind this than has come out—but I'll not tell it."

Find Girl in Bed.

Girls rooming in the Y. W. C. A. building were startled at 8 last night, when a revolver shot rang out in the rooms of Miss Olney. Half a dozen, with the matron, rushed to the room. The door was not locked, and they entered easily.

On the bed lay Miss Olney. She had undressed and put on her nightgown. She lay on her back, with the coverlid drawn up to her waist. Her right hand, hanging over the edge of the bed, still firmly clutched the 38-calibre revolver. On the white gown above her right breast, a red stain was slowly spreading. The girl was moaning faintly.

While some of the girl friends made Miss Olney more comfortable, help was summoned. Dr. H. E. Sanger was on the spot in a few minutes and shortly after Lieutenant W. F. O'Neill of the Providence police arrived. After Dr. Sargent had staunched the girl's wound, she was moved to a stretcher and taken to the Rhode Island Hospital.

After an hour Miss Olney was resting more comfortably, and Lieutenant O'Neill attempted to induce her to make a statement as to her reasons for her act.

Girl Refuses to Talk.

She admitted readily enough that the shot had been fired by herself. "But I won't tell why I did it," she said. "I shall never tell unless I am sure I am going to die."

The Lieutenant asked if she wished anyone notified. At first, she refused to give any name.

"They will know it in the morning," she said. "Then perhaps they will suffer as I have suffered."

Finally, however, she changed her mind, and gave the name of a sister, Mrs. Cynthia van Trump.

Mrs. van Trump was summoned to the hospital by telephone. She came and talked with the girl for several minutes.

When the ambulance arrived and Dr. Hamilton, the ambulance surgeon, spoke to

ROBERT M'ROY, RED SOX TREASURER, IN BOSTON TO-DAY

Mr. McRoy, one of the new owners, comes to take charge of the finances of the newly organized Boston American League club.

RED SOX AT TOP, SAYS MR. M'ROY

"Boston will have a great team this season. The Red Sox will be at the top. We have put everything into the team and we will have a winner."

Robert B. McRoy, treasurer of the Boston Red Sox baseball club made this statement to the AMERICAN to-day upon his arrival in town for a meeting of the club owners. Jake Stahl will arrive late to-day and more encouragement from the playing end will then be given out.

McRoy with his wife and five-year-old son are at the Copley Square Hotel and will remain here for the rest of the year.

The new treasurer and part owner of the Red Sox was enthusiastic over the outlook for the team. He said:

"We shall win next year. We shall give Boston the best team it has ever had. I don't like to say anything about the playing end of the game, for Stahl is looking out for that. You can say that we shall give this town a wonderful ball team.

Great New Baseball Plant.

"I have been ten years with President Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox team as well as President Johnson of the American League, and I believe I can make good. This is my sole ambition, to give Boston the best team in the American League.

"We are going to give the fans a great baseball plant. The work is progressing well. I was out to see it last night and Mr. Taylor and the architects are to be congratulated.

"I have been South and made the hotel arrangements for the team's training trip. The team will go to Hot Springs, Ark., about the middle of March and will remain there about three weeks. The itinerary of the training trip will be given out in a few days.

Stahl Goes to Hot Springs.

"Stahl has three or four good youngsters that will be given a tryout. One of the men is Leonard, who has a fine record. Stahl will go to the Springs about February 20.

"McAleer will look after the scouting end of the game, and we are out to win.

"Stahl has several letters from Big Bill Carrigan, and in every one he states that he is feeling fine and will play the game of his life. They tell me, although I have never seen him work, that O'Brien is a

LEGISLATURE CONVENES FOR SESSION OF 1912

The Massachusetts Legislature for 1912 convened to-day with the time-honored ceremonies and with some features of special interest. Chief among the latter was the speech of acceptance by Representative Grafton D. Cushing of Boston upon being elected Speaker of the House.

Speaker Cushing called particular attention to "truly progressive" measures which will come before the new legislature, particularly in relation to improving efficiency of State and municipal governments and to control State, county and municipal expenditures.

He called our labor laws adequate, but unsatisfactorily enforced.

He urged an eight-hour day for children, upheld the party enrollment law and suggested reduction of the 5,000 names now necessary to nomination paper.

Leading paragraphs in Speaker Cushing's speech were:

Cushing on New Legislation.

"There are before the Legislature various bills contemplating the control of public expenditures and the supervision of city, town and county governments. The Boston Finance Commission has been so successful in reforming many of the abuses which existed in the government of the city that a demand has arisen in many quarters for a State Finance Commission. Under this general designation there are three distinct directions in which an improvement of existing methods may be made.

"First, the supervision of county, city, and State indebtedness. Some State board may well be given supervision over county, city and town indebtedness with the duty to investigate all requests for authority to borrow beyond the debt limit and to report to the Legislature whether the loan is necessary or not.

"Second, a more thorough control over State expenditures. Under the methods adopted by the United States and many of the State Governments there is not an adequate control over public expenditures and appropriations; the duty of making up a budget and the investigation of the necessity for the appropriations asked for by various departments is confined to a committee of the Legislature which is annually changing in its membership and sits for only a part of the year.

Investigate the Estimates.

"A more thorough understanding of the amount necessary to conduct the business of the State efficiently and economically coud be reached if it were the duty of some permanent official elected by the Legislature or appointed by the Governor to investigate the estimates before the Legislature convenes and thus be in a position to make recommendations to the Legislature and to the Governor and Council based on a careful examination of the estimates and expenditures of the various departments and institutions.

"Third, the investigation of the efficiency of town, city and county governments. Whenever the County Commissioners, the City Council, the Board of Selectmen, or a certain number of taxpayers believe that it would be well to have an investigation of the town, city or county, the Governor should have general authority to appoint a finance commission for the particular purpose.

"The labor laws of the Commonwealth are apparently adequate at the present time; their enforcement is unsatisfactory; the remedy would seem to be the creation of a department of labor to enforce existing laws and to take over various activities relating to labor which are now

G. G. A. CRITICISES STREET LIGHTING

The Good Government Association heads an article on the gas lighting of Boston streets in the current issue of City Affairs with this question: "Are the cards stacked?" The article criticises Mayor Fitzgerald and the Finance Commission, and says: "After a survey of the facts, the thoughtful citizen may well ask when are the proposals, investigations and advertising to result in action which will save the money of the city? Is there a desire to continue indefinitely the existing arrangements with the Rising Sun Street Lighting Company?"

FATHER GASSON'S PRAYER AT OPENING OF STATE SENATE

"May these revered men whom the citizens have chosen to sit in this sacred assembly ever remember that they are the champions of civic liberty and the protectors of the people's rights; may they encourage every legitimate aspiration of the leaders of commerce and fearlessly secure that recompense to the toiler which reason and justice demand for human labor and for the outpouring of human energies."—From Father Thomas J. Gasson's prayer at the convening of the State Senate to-day.

PHELPS RESPITE UNTIL JAN. 20

A respite until January 20 was to-day granted by the Executive Council to Silas N. Phelps, sentenced to die before Saturday night.

Phelps was found guilty of the murder of Emmett Haskins, a deputy sheriff, who attempted to arrest him in the northwestern part of the State. He is in the Charlestown prison, in the death house.

A request for a respite of thirty days was to-day presented to the Executive Council by Governor Foss. The ground for the request was that new evidence was in sight that might result in a new trial for the condemned man.

Lawyer William A. Davenport appeared before the Council and made an argument in favor of the petition. It was said that the vote for the respite was unanimous, but instead of making the time thirty days they limited it to January 20.

Governor Foss was anxious to have the man's life saved, having visited him in prison. Efforts are to be put forth between now and the day the respite expires to save Phelps from the electric chair.

The United States Supreme Court has ben asked to grant a writ of error in the case.

The Right of Domicile.

In the writ of error, the Supreme Court is asked to rule on a question which the highest court in this State has already decidedly adversely to Phelps, that of whether a deputy sheriff has the right to enter without a warrant the domicile of a man suspected of a felony. This was done by Deputy Sheriff Haskins, whom Phelps shot and killed. If a writ of error is granted on this point it will mean a new trial for Phelps.

The amount of bond requisite for filing the petition was offered Attorney Davenport late last week, when it seemed his client would have to suffer the extreme penalty of the law. The bond was offered jointly by three men, two of whom have asked to remain unknown, while the third is Daniel C. Miles of Worcester, a brother of General Miles.

An affidavit signed by William M. Bishop of North Adams, which contradicts in a measure testimony presented at the trial of Phelps, is also in the possession of Attorney Davenport. In the affidavit Bishop sets forth that he was present when the wounds of William Penniman, the mill superintendent who was stabbed by Phelps, were being dressed.

It was to arrest Phelps for this stabbing that Deputy Sheriff Haskins went to the Phelps's home on the night he was shot. Bishop says that after the shooting he heard Penniman say, "I have use for Silas Phelps yet," and he states that, in his opinion, Penniman had not thought of prosecution.

He also claims to have heard Dr. Eddy, the attending physician, say that he could not tell at that time whether or not Penniman's wounds were serious. This, it is claimed, is in contradiction of Dr. Eddy's testimony at the trial.

Everything is in readiness at the State Prison for the execution. The chair has been tested and the condemned man could be taken to it at almost a moment's notice.

FOUGHT BROTHER AT GETTYSBURG

Word of the death of General William Henry Jewell, the one-time Confederate soldier, who made his Summer home with a sister at Lynn, was received in that city from Orlando, Florida, to-day. The cause of death was not stated. General Jewell was a brother of Colonel B. Wood Jewell of the Union army. During the battle of Gettysburg both brothers were in command of detachments that fought each other. He was born at Wakefield, and at the time of his death was District Attorney at Warren County, Florida.

TWO MICHIGAN BANKS DESTROYED BY FIRE

MARQUETTE, Mich., Jan. 3.—The Miners' National Bank at Ishpeming and the Negaunee State Bank at Negaunee, three miles apart, were both destroyed by fire which broke out simultaneously to-day. The loss to the Ishpeming bank is about $150,000.

RYAN ENTERS PLEA OF GUILTY OF KILLING WIFE

Unattended by counsel, relatives or friends, Francis E. Ryan pleaded guilty in Somerville District Court to-day to a charge of murder in shooting his young wife, Georgianna M. L. Ryan, the day after Christmas.

The plea was accepted by Judge L. Roger Wentworth, who held Ryan without bail for the March sitting of the Middlesex Superior Court. The man's case was presented to the Middlesex Grand Jury Tuesday.

It was reported by the police that Ryan might be examined as to his sanity.

Ryan and his wife were married three years ago, when she was a girl of sixteen. They separated several times. The last separation came a fortnight before Christmas. Mrs. Ryan went to visit friends on Highland street, West Somerville.

Unattended by Counsel.

December 26 Ryan went to her and asked her to go to walk. On Winter street, which is poorly lighted, Ryan asked her to return to him. She refused. The police say that Ryan then drew a revolver and fired five shots at the terrified girl. Every shot hit her. She was taken to Somerville Hospital, where she died on the last day of the year. She signed an ante-mortem statement, charging Ryan with shooting her.

After the shooting Ryan fled into North Cambridge, but he was trailed all the way by a Somerville boy named William A. Frink, 2d, on a bicycle. In North Cambridge Frink pointed out Ryan to a policeman, who arrested him.

Ryan was first charged with assault with intent to kill, pending the outcome of his wife's case. When originally arraigned he pleaded guilty to that charge but, on advice of his counsel, Thomas F. Vahey, he changed the plea to not guilty.

In court to-day the original charge was nol-prossed and a new one of murder was immediately read. Ryan had no counsel with him this time. In a dazed tone the man pleaded guilty to the murder charge. Police Captain Robert R. Perry made no comment and Judge Wentworth accepted the plea.

Mayor Thanks Boy.

Mayor Burns of Somerville to-day wrote the following personal letter of appreciation to Young Frink:

"I wish to heartily commend you for the services that you rendered to the public and the police in following and assisting in the arrest of Francis E. Ryan, who shot his wife on December 26, she having since died. I feel that if you had not performed this meritorious duty his apprehension would have been much more difficult. Your conduct is worthy of the emulation of all citizens and is most praiseworthy."

CHICAGO STOCK YARD FIRE LOSS $500,000

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—The second fire in the same building in a single day did $500,000 damage to the plant of Swift & Company, in the heart of the Union Stock Yards here. Adjoining buildings were threatened and the firemen had a strenuous fight to control the flames. This fire was within a block of a disastrous blaze of a year ago.

The first blaze did about $25,000 worth of damage to a warehouse.

The second fire started in the smokehouse, a long, five-story brick building, and spread to an adjoining warehouse, causing a large loss.

VERA E. RANDALL, WHO WENT TO MAINE TO BE MARRIED

Waltham girl who, with Edwin S. Wellman of Waverly, was the first to seek a Maine marriage license since the "five-day notice" law went into effect in this State.

FIRST ELOPERS OF NEW YEAR

The first young people of Massachusetts and Greater Boston to take advantage of Maine's marriage license laws since the "five-day notice" anti-elopement law went into effect in this State at New Year's, are Edwin S. Wellman of Waverley and Miss Vera E. Randall of Waltham. They secured a marriage license to-day from City Clerk Waterhouse of Portland and then left his office, presumably in ques. of a clergyman to marry them.

Mr. Wellman gave his age as twenty-six and his occupation as electrician. Miss Randall is a dressmaker. Her age was given as thirty-one.

Ever since Massachusetts' new law, requiring five days between filing marriage intentions and securing a license, went into effect, City Clerk H. Waterhouse of Portland has been waiting for some Massachusetts couple to come to him for a license. Hardly had his office been opened to-day in its temporary quarters in the Court Square building that Mr. Wellman and Miss Randall appeared. They may have read the article in the last Sunday AMERICAN, giving detailed directions how to get to the Portland city clerk's office from Union Station in that city. At any rate, they came bright and early to-day, secured their license, paid the dollar and departed.

Massachusetts couples wishing to wed out the State formerly went to Rhode Island. Last year "Little Rhody" passed a law requiring five days elapsed time between intention and marriage. Then Nashua, N. H., became a handy resort for such couples. Last Summer New Hampshire put a five-day law into effect. At New Year's the Massachusetts law went on, and this left Portland, Me., as the natural goal of those who seek marriage without delay.

NOT PROMOTED; BOY A SUICIDE

AMHERST, Jan. 3.—Boyish dread of ridicule because he failed of promotion at the close of the Fall term is regarded as the cause of the suicide of sixteen-year-old Harold Hubbard, whose self-destruction is one of the most pitiful cases this town has ever known.

Mrs. F. E. Bestor, with whom Harold boarded, says that the lad was troubled over missing promotion and dreaded returning to school for fear the other boys would laugh at him. But he bravely went to school Monday. Monday night he killed himself with chloroform. He poured the contents of a two-ounce vial on a stocking, went to bed, drew the bedclothes over his head and held the saturated stocking to his nose till he fell into unconsciousness and death. The methodical preparations the boy made show that he had fully made up his mind to die.

Harold was a resident of Enfield.

His death was not discovered till Mrs. Bestor went to his room the next morning to arouse him.

FIRE IN HOTEL WHERE CARDINAL IS STOPPING

NAPLES, Jan. 3.—Fire broke out early to-day in the Bartolinis Hotel, at which Cardinal Farley of New York is stopping. The American cardinal was asleep at the time and was not aroused. The blaze was in the lumber room. Cardinal Farley has purchased a set of sixteenth century vestments to take hime with him.

RICHESON DEFENCE DECIDED

Within the next twenty-four hours a decisive step of some nature is to be taken by counsel for the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, whose trial for the alleged murder of Avis Linnell is slated to begin eleven days from to-day.

The move under consideration will be presaged by an application to the court for an order to permit the defence to assign their own doctors to examine and observe the accused clergyman, and indications to-day were strong that on the defence staff of legal experts would be some skilled alienist.

Every day that brings the trial nearer finds the mental condition of the former pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church looming larger and with greater significance on the legal horizon.

It is impossible, however, to predict with any degree of certainty at this stage to what degree of Richeson's mental status will figure; whether it will be used, coupled with his impaired physical health due to his act of self-injury, merely to gain a delay of the trial, or whether it will form a part or the nucleus of the defence.

Developments Expected.

The only men who know are Attorneys William A. Morse and John L. Lee, and they are not talking just now. They both claim there may be something to say later. But they are extremely busy and that they have something up their sleeves is apparent. And that "something" is about ripe.

A remarkable improvement in the condition of Richeson to-day followed the long conference yesterday between him and his lawyers.

Richeson, who two weeks ago injured himself terribly in his cell, had so far recovered that he was up and dressed and sauntering about his cell when Dr. Howard A. Lothrop called upon him to-day.

There had been a rumor that the clergyman whose trial for the alleged murder of Avis Linnell is to start a week from next Monday had suffered a relapse last night. Dr. Lothrop denied this.

"Mr. Richeson is better to-day," said Dr. Lothrop, "than he has been at any time since I was called to see him. In fact, there has been a remarkable improvement over his condition of yesterday. He was fully dressed and walking about in his cell."

Another Conference at Jail.

Richeson was eagerly awaiting the visit of his attorneys to-day. They discussed his case with him half an hour yesterday, when he began to show signs of fatigue. He was able to-day to talk with them much longer. His lawyers hoped to be able to practically complete their line of defence, so far as Richeson's personal help was concerned, after their visit to-day.

Mr. Lee and Mr. Morse went into conference early to-day in a downtown office, working on the material in hand. They are not satisfied yet that Richeson will be physically able to stand the ordeal of trial by a week from Monday. Mr. Morse said:

"We are hard at work every minute on the defence. We have it well in hand. We shall talk to Richeson again to-day. That is about all that we care to say at this time."

District Attorney Pelletier and Assistant District Attorney Lavelle are now giving their entire attention to the Richeson case. They are going on the belief that the trial will start a week from Monday.

Mrs. Isabelle Hallett of Hyannis, with whom Richeson boarded at the time he was pastor of the church there, is to be an important witness for the prosecution, at the minister's trial. She knew Avis Linnell, the murdered girl, as well as she knew her own daughter. And she knew of the friendship between Richeson and the little choir singer.

To Tell Richeson's Courtship.

Her testimony is expected to give a clear and definite story of Richeson's life in Hyannis during the period when he wooed and won the heart of the girl, who, it is alleged, he afterwards slew.

Mrs. Hallett has been rigorously questioned by District Attorney Pelletier, and will be one of the first witnesses called when the government begins to tell the story of Richeson's acquaintance with Avis Linnell, at the death trial.

COUNSEL AGAIN VISIT RICHESON

Violet's sister, was engaged, will be another important witness for the State. District Attorney Pelletier yesterday sent him a summons to appear, together with a writ of protection from any suits which might be brought against him during the time he is in this State as a witness. Mr. Holt is at present in Vermont. He will return to Jamestown next week, when the summons and writ will be handed to him.

Attorneys Lee and Morse steadfastly refuse to discuss their plans for the defence of the accused pastor.

As a result of the conference at the jail, however, the impression grew to-day that the lawyers for the clergyman had reached this decision:

First, that no extension of time for the beginning of the trial would be asked, and it would go on a week from next Monday, unless the government proposes a delay.

Second, that no change of any importance would be made from the line of defence decided upon before Richeson's attack on himself.

Another rumor that was generally credited among those in touch with the preparations for the trial was that Miss Violet Edmands had so far recovered her health that she would be able to attend the trial and testify for the defence.

At the jail to-day it was said that Richeson was in fine condition, considering what he had recently gone through. He is up and dressed and walks about the large room on the second floor. He is more cheerful, also, than he has been for some time.

The clergyman, it is said, looked forward with much eagerness to the visit of his lawyers, especially Mr. Lee, who spent the holidays in Virginia at his home, which is near that of Richeson's father, Varland Richeson.

Lee Talks of Richeson.

In discussing Mr. Richeson's condition, Attorney Lee said:

"He has changed greatly since I last saw him. It would be difficult to imagine him the same man I talked with three weeks ago.

"He appeared wan and weak, and he gave evidences of the suffering he had endured in more ways than one.

"It was very apparent that he is weak; weak physically, and naturally this physical weakness is reflected in his mental capacity.

"While Mr. Morse and I were talking with him in regard to the case, we could easily discern the weakness coming over him, and after about half an hour we desisted in our discussion of the case. It would have been brutal, to my way of thinikng, to subject him to further interrogation."

"Did Mr. Richeson's condition impress you as such as to preclude the possibility of his going to trial on January 15?" Mr. Lee was asked.

"I am not a physician, and consequently I do not consider myself qualified to judge of the improvement that might be made between now and the date set for trial, but, personally, at the present time, and in his present condition, it is my opinion that Mr. Richeson would not be able to endure thirty minutes on the witness stand.

Richeson May Gain Strength.

"However, his condition might improve rapidly during the remaining week and a half, so that I would not care to discuss or make any forecast or prophecy upon his state of health on January 15."

Mr. Morse, upon his return to his office after his visit to the jail, said:

"Mr. Lee and myself visited our client in the Charles Street Jail and had an extended conversation with him. We found him sitting up in a chair dressed. He was unable to walk unassisted, but after talking with him for a while it was apparent to us that he was exhausted and we deemed it advisiable not to discuss the case any longer. We then changed our conversation to general matters."

Mr. Morse attributed Richeson's mental weakness to his physical condition.

Dr. Howard A. Lothrop, the surgeon who has been in daily attendance upon Richeson since he inflicted the wounds upon himself, two weeks ago, said his condition was very satisfactory.

"He is getting along splendidly," said Dr. Lothrop, "and his condition is as good as could possibly be hoped. He has been walking for the past few days, and there does not appear to be any lameness."

Harrison Out of Case.

Beverly R. Harrison, the Virginia lawyer, who came North with Mr. Lee on the latter's first visit, will probably not figure in the case any further. Mr. Lee said that Mr. Harrison was occupied in legal affairs in the South and he did not expect him to come to Boston again. Mr. Harrison was engaged by Thomas Richeson, father of the defendant.

Mr. Lee said to-day, "During my late stay in Virginia, I had two or three talks with Richeson's father, relative to his son's coming trial. He will return to Boston for the trial, but I do not know just when he will come. I have not seen the Edmands family since returning and I do not know what their opinions are.

"I do not like to say it, but to my mind it will be a brutal thing to do to force Mr. Richeson to go through this ordeal of a trial for life on the date now fixed, unless he has made a wonderful change for the better by January 15. Of course, they can bring him back and forth in a carriage and put him into a chair to listen to the affecting details of the trial, but being thoroughly square and fair does not seem to me to correspond with making a man only a short time out of the shadow of death appear at a trial when he is not able to walk.

"As to whether I have made a request to have a doctor for the defence examine Mr. Richeson with a view to postponing the trial, I can only say I have not. Mr. Morse may have done so, but he has not informed me of it."

SOUTHERLAND WEDDING DAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3.—The chief New Year's function in which local and Boston society is interested, is the wedding, to-day, of Miss Mary Southerland, daughter of Rear Admiral H. H. Southerland, U. S. N., and Mrs. Southerland, to Louis Bacon of Boston, Harvard graduate, stock broker, member of the Tennis and Raquet and the Eastern Yacht Clubs.

The ceremony was celebrated in the Church of the Covenant.

The bride is a close friend and companion of Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the President, who tendered Miss Southerland a dinner on December 22, to which the elite of Washington society were invited.

It was only last year that the bride-to-be was an attendant at the marriage of Countess Luise Alexandra von Bornstorff, daughter of the German Ambassador and the Countess von Bernstorff, to Count Pourtales, an attache of the German Embassy.

Miss Southerland is a member of the younger set in Washington society and has always taken a leading part in all the society functions. A dinner and dance was tendered her by Mrs. William F. Draper, widow of General W. F. Draper, former Ambassador to Italy.

Many dinners, luncheons and other fetes, followed in succession since the announcement of the engagement of Miss Southerland to Louis Bacon.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Francis E. (Crowninshield) Bacon. Following the engagement of the young couple, Mr. Bacon paid an extensive visit to the home of the Southerland family, who were occupying apartments at the Connecticut.

WOBURN CAR MEN TO DANCE TO-NIGHT

The fifth annual concert and ball of the Woburn division of the Bay State Street Railway employes will be held this evening at Lyceum Hall in that city. This year marks the passing of the present superintendent of the division, Albert E. Meyers, and the coming of his successor, Eugene Donavon of Salem. Mr. Meyers has been promoted to the office of superintendent of the Reading division. The dance committee consists of John E. Connolly, chairman; E. J. McDonough, James Maguire, John J. Regan, H. E. Praria, Thomas J. Sweeney, Alfred Madsen and Louis P. Jones.

FORWARD FUND WORK RENEWED

The second campaign to raise $15,000 for the Men and Religion Forward Movement begins this noon at the Boston City Club. Over one-third, or $5,172, has been raised. With this amount in hand the fund committee took a recess for the holidays, with a vote to begin the second campaign for the fund on January 3. Meanwhile the collecting teams have been increased from five to ten, with ten men on a team. This makes a total of 100 men undertaking the collection of the remaining less than $10,000.

GENERAL REYES IS SERIOUSLY ILL

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 3.—General Bernardo Reyes, who was taken a military prisoner in Neuvo Leon on Christmas Day, has contracted malarial fever in Santiago prison, where he is confined, and his condition to-day was said to be serious. The general's advanced age is against rapid recovery.

NEW YORK MAN KILLS BERKSHIRE WILDCAT

LENOX, Jan. 3.—A wildcat that has been the terror of New Marlboro in southern Berkshire for a year has been killed by Dewees W. Dilworth, son of Joseph R. Dilworth of No. 50 West Forty-seventh street, New York. Mr. Dilworth has been spending the holidays with Hildreth K. Bloodgood at Mepal Manor, Mr. Bloodgood's country place in New Marlboro.

great pitcher and we have great hopes of him."

"Stahl and I are sure to get along nicely together," said Mr. McRoy. "I have known Stahl for a good many years and we have been very close together. I was a schoolmate of Mrs. Stahl.

How Stahl Came to Boston.

"In fact, I was the one who introduced Stahl into professional baseball. In 1902 Henry Killilea, then president of the Boston Americans, came to the office of the Chicago Americans and told me that Alex Smith had broken a finger and that the Bostons had been left without a good man to fill his place behind the bat. He asked me if I knew of anyone he could get to replace Smith.

"I told him there was a likely youngster at the University of Illinois and that he would play in a game that afternoon against Northwestern University. It was Stahl to whom I referred. So Killilea and I went out to see the game.

"Stahl showed up in fine form that day, knocking two home runs, two triples and a single. Killilea, who was highly pleased at Stahl's work, signalled to him during the game. He asked Stahl how he would like to join the Boston Americans.

"'I have been thinking of entering professional baseball,' Stahl told him. 'In fact, Selee of the Chicago Nationals has asked me to play with his team.' Stahl said he would call up Selee to see if he would meet Killilea's offer. Selee answered back: 'Will meet your terms.' Then Selee wired to Jim Hart, president of the Chicago Nationals, who was at Cincinnati, and Hart wired to Stahl: 'You are our man.'

"This displeased Stahl. 'No one owns me,' he said. 'I will play with the Bostons.'

"You see, this happened during the war times. Stahl had been asked to play with the Chicago Nationals, but he had not agreed to, nor had he been offered a contract. And the Chicagos come along and say 'He's our man' when someone else wants him. That is the way they did things during the war days.

"Well, Stahl came to Boston and made good. I do not believe the story of how he came here was ever told before."

MAGNIFICENT CAR TO CARRY EDISON

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—To induce Thomas A. Edison to attend its banquet in Chicago, the Western Electrical Association sent a special Pullman car to Orange, N. J., to transport the inventor to the western city. Mr. Edison consented to go, under the circumstances. The car is equipped with all the most up-to-date electrical equipments, has a series of staterooms, drawing rooms, and a fine dining room. One of the best chefs that could be obtained in New York was assigned to the car. Mr. Edison, his wife, daughter and secretary left Orange to-day. The banquet will take place on Friday night.

A Satiny Complexion and Beautiful Hair

(Mrs. B. R. in Vernon's.)

"Rough and red skin, chaps and cold sores are the bane of women in Winter. To get rid of these, apply Mother's Salve before retiring. It is a splendid remedy for pimples, eczema and other skin afflictions, and has no equal in healing old sores, burns, scalds and cuts.

"A better protection than powder for the complexion is to rub the face, neck and arms gently with a solution made by dissolving an original package of mayatone in half a pint of witch hazel. It will not rub off or show and makes the skin soft, satiny and pliable, and prevents growth of hair.

"Don't catch cold washing your head. To make a dry shampoo that will clean the scalp and hair, put a cupful of corn meal in a fruit jar, add the contents of an original package of therox, and shake well. Sprinkle a spoonful on the head and brush through the hair. It will leave the hair light and fluffy and heighten its original color."

SICK HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, TORPID LIVER, CONSTIPATION—CASCARETS.

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous matter, instead of being thrown out, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, awful, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the poison move on and out and purifying the blood. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organs are especially prone to sick headaches, need not suffer, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and perfect health for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle, cleansing, too. Children gladly take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

TAFT SAYS HE'S IN FIGHT TO STAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—President Taft is in the race to stay. No influence whatever can induce him to withdraw from the presidential fight, whether it be in favor of Roosevelt, La Follette or some unnamed possibility.

This much was positively asserted by the friends with whom the President talked to-day. The President believes the country will indorse his administration, and further believes that the Republican party cannot repudiate him. This is the substance of the statement made by the President to his callers to-day. To one of them he is reported to have said:

"I am in this fight and expected to stay in it to the finish, unless death should interfere."

Senator La Follette was due to arrive in Chicago to-day, and the politicians waited to hear from his own lips whether the statement sent from Grand Rapids that the Wisconsin man was about to withdraw from the presidential race in favor of Colonel Roosevelt was true.

His friends, many of whom have practically staked their political future on the success of La Follette for the presidency, refused to believe that he could so late in the day "quit cold" and step out of the way of the Roosevelt boom.

His friends say Senator La Follette has become convinced during his speech-making tour of the last week in Ohio and Michigan that a progressive Republican can win in the national convention next June and defeat Taft.

If the progressives are divided Taft will win.

NEW YORK STATE LEGISLATURE MEETS

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—The New York State Legislature convened to-day for its 135th session. The Republicans are supreme in the Assembly, while the Democrats hold the reins in the Senate. For the first time on record a Socialist sat in the Assembly. He is Herbert M. Merrill of Schenectady. Governor Dix in his annual message to the Legislature makes a strong plea for the enactment of amendments to the direct nomination and primary laws. He thinks all members of the State committees should be elected at the Spring primaries, and that membership of the State committees should be enlarged by law to include a representative from each Assembly district. Governor Dix strongly favors passage of a law that shall prevent the buying and selling of votes.

BIG STRIKE OF COAL MINERS IS HALTED

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 3.—Plans for an immediate strike of coal miners in the anthracite region were halted to-day by a conference of local and national officials of the Mine Workers' Union, at which it was decided to postpone definite action until after the national convention of miners in Indianapolis, January 16. The chief demands of the miners are: Official recognition of their union by the companies; payment by weight instead of by carloads for coal mined; collection of union dues by companies; eight-hour work day; abolition of conciliation board.

TAKE ALLEGED HOLD-UP MAN

Charged with being the man who held up seventeen-year-old Grace Young of Lynn Saturday night, robbing her of her week's wages at the point of a loaded revolver, James Capsan, aged twenty-three, was placed under arrest by the Lynn police to-day. Capsan is a comparative stranger in that city.

In addition to the robbery of Miss Young, who was held up at 11 o'clock when about to enter home at No. 92 Hamilton avenue, Capsan is charged with being the man who held up Emma Newth of Lynn earlier the same night. He will be taken before both young women for identification.

HAIL MRS. WILSON AS AMERICAN BEAUTY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Huntington Wilson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, is regarded as the purest type of American beauty in Washington. She wins this title through the fact that she is known as "the woman with the chiselled features." This is distinctly an American type as opposed to the moulded features which is the English viewpoint of great beauty.

FIRE HORSES RUN AWAY; TWO HURT

The first accident in the fire department since the Hyde Park department became a part of the Boston department occurred to-day when Charles Windless, fifty-four, driver for Chemical No. 14, and Joseph F. May, twenty-eight, a probationary man in the service, were thrown from an exercising wagon, which had dashed into a telegraph pole after the horses became unmanageable.

Windless was rendered unconscious. He was hurried to the Lynnwood street hospital, Hyde Park, where he was found to be suffering from a bad cut on the head. It is feared that his skull is fractured. May got a bad shaking up and was given medical treatment.

When the horses struck the pole the centre pole of the wagon snapped and one of the rear wheels flew off. This caused the horses to prance in the street for awhile and then dash madly into Cleary square, where they were captured by Thomas Griffin and Austin W. Ford.

Call Fort Hill 7600

If you want to change your present telephone service to any of the different classes of District Measured Service, the excess rates of which were reduced Jan. 1.

If the changes can be effected in time, the correct listing will appear in the next issue of the Telephone Directory, now going to press. If there is a telephone at your elbow, act promptly. There will be no charge for a call to this number from any telephone or Pay Station in the Metropolitan District.

Two typical illustrations will demonstrate the application of this reduction:

1. In the Central District, all calls in excess of the 960 for $48 over a one-party business line, will be three cents each, whether made to the seven Central District exchanges or to any of the twenty-five Suburban exchanges within an eight-mile radius. Prior to this reduction such excess calls to any of these twenty-five Suburban exchanges cost five cents each.

2. In the different Suburban districts, all calls in excess of the 480 for $24, over a two-party residence line, will be three cents each, whether made to exchanges within the exchange district or to Central or other Suburban District exchanges within an eight-mile radius of the calling exchange. Prior to this reduction, calls to exchanges outside the exchange district but within an eight-mile radius of the calling exchange, cost five cents each.

This reduction applies not only to the two specific schedules used for illustration, but to all Central District or Suburban District measured service rates, and virtually makes a measured service zone within which all excess calls to any Metropolitan exchange within an eight-mile radius of the calling exchange may be had for three cents each.

MRS. PARK DEFENDS COLLEGE GIRLS

Radcliffe Graduate Denies That Women's Colleges Are "Old Maid Factories."

By SYBIL WARNE.

"Women's colleges, old maid factories, eh?

Oh, not at all.

Dr. Sprague of Amherst Agricultural College, in making such a statement you have made a whirlwind.

You might have said this fifty years ago with impunity, but you cannot say it to-day. You're off your trolley.

Mrs. Charles Park, a Radcliffe graduate, who scouts the idea of Dr. Sprague of Amherst Agricultural College that women's colleges are "old maid factories."

Mrs. Charles Park a graduate of Radcliffe College, prominent in this city in advocating a new mission for women, says some one has thrown much dust into the doctor's eyes.

What woman is getting from a college education is a trained mind, she asserts.

A college bred woman makes the best suggestions to her husband.

She can help him out of his difficulties more effectively than to have him go to some man and confide in him.

A college education makes a woman independent. She may marry if she pleases.

It does not make a woman think less of home life, but makes her better equipped for her home life.

She can devise new methods of washing the dishes.

She can plan with her knowledge of mathematics to keep the bookkeeper at the grocery store upon "pins and needles."

She can argue with the landlord and put up a good case for back rent.

She can settle all disputes that her husband cannot settle.

"Women's colleges old-maid factories. Well! indeed, this is amusing," humorously declared Mrs. Park when shown the report of Dr. Robert S. I. Sprague of Amherst Agricultural College, before a select body of educators a short time ago.

"Giving Trained Minds."

"I do not see how any man living in this progressive twentieth century was allow himself to have the dust thrown into his eyes in this shape. You must pity such men who make these assertions. They are evidently rasping under some difficulty, and they do not know how to get the best of it except by making some such nonsensical remark as this.

"Women's colleges are anything but old maids' factories. What woman is getting from college life to-day is a train d mind. I am speaking from some experience because I have spent four years in college and what I have gained from a college course is what thousands of other women have gained.

"A college education does not make us think any of the less of home life. In think the college educated woman is thinking more than ever of it and when it falls to her lot to establish a home of her own she is equipped for that duty.

"Women do not think less of matrimony because they have a college education. They are not, however, dependent upon it.

"The thoughtful woman of to-day who has back of her a college education knows how to handle the difficulties of home life with better judgment than her sister who has not had this advantage.

"Then think what a great assistance she can be to her husband, when she can put her training in college to advantage in her own home and does not need to go to her husband with every trifling difficulty for solution.

"There are many women who go into business after they have finished their college course, but three-fourths of them do not. Those who do go into business feel for a time that they should put their education to some practical test.

Talks It Over With His Wife.

"But who makes a better wife to-day than the college bred woman. Who can make more helpful suggestions to her husband? Who can more wisely assist him in solving his problem?

Instead of a man going to some other man with his business to talk over let him confide with his wife and with her trained judgment and skill she can help him to see some way out of his problem.

"In married life, it is no longer the sway of the husband over the wife, but it is the co-operation of them both in the common work of making the home life ideal.

"A woman may marry a college-bred man, but if she is college bred herself think what a home can be made for the children to be born to them.

"Suppose that there are more unappropriated women in Boston than in any other city because it is claimed we put a higher estimate upon education than elsewhere, is that any reason for slurring a college education for women?

"You might as well call colleges for men old bachelors' factories because so many men after leaving college go into clubs and remain single until they see their mistake.

"If a woman becomes more particular in selecting her mate for life because she has an education back of her, do you blame her? Many women rush into matrimony thoughtlessly, and if a college education can prevent this, as I think it will help womankind to think more seriously about it, why is it not a great benefit?

"But no man really objects to the higher education of woman to-day. That matter was threshed out years ago, and thousands of mothers and fathers are sacrificing their own interests and sending their girls to college to-day.

"If Dr. Sprague has three daughters, or even one, in his family, and watches their growth and progress in his own family and wants them to be of service to the world would he not in every way encourage their education even to the sending of them to college?

"Women are getting more education than they formerly did, consequently are proving themselves worthy of it in many ways. They make the mothers who will love their homes, who will sacrifice everything for them and in defending them they will be able to show usefulness of their college or high school training.

"Education does not make women old maidish. It makes them take a larger and more intelligent interest in life and keeps the men up to a higher standard of living."

NATION AWAITS FOSS INAUGURAL

Governor Foss's campaign for the Democratic nomination for President will start with an aggressive, nation-wide swing when to-morrow he delivers his inaugural message, taking the gubernatorial chair for his second term.

The message is expected to be a bugle blast that will be heard across the continent. From the moment that document, upon which the Governor has spent a good deal of time and thought, reaches the public, his fight will be on. Political leaders all over the country are watching the Bay State Governor.

Governor Foss always fights expecting to win. His star has not failed him so far, nor has he lost faith in it. Between now and the holding of the next Democratic national convention the Governor of Massachusetts will command national attention.

Flocking to Foss Standard.

Following the action of the Democratic State Committee in indorsing Governor Foss for the nomination, his friends have begun to flock to his standard.

Dispatches from Philadelphia to-day declared a prominent politician had disclosed plans to bring forth Foss as a dark horse in the Democratic National Committee meeting in Washington next Monday.

Former Congressman Joseph H. O'Neil declared to-day that New England Democrats should stand by Governor Foss and make his candidacy an assured success. He said:

"I hope to see the leading Democrats of the State take hold of the Foss boom and push it for all it is worth. Governor Foss certainly deserves every honor that the Democrats of the State can give him. If New England goes to the National convention practically a unit for Governor Foss it will make a fine showing and the rest of the country will be obliged to sit up and take notice.

"Governor Foss's administration of State affairs has been on a high plane, liberal, and in the interest of the plain people. The party will make no mistake in backing the Governor and I wish him every success if he is a candidate for the honor."

Many expressions of opinion have been obtained in various New England cities. Some of these follow:

Views of Some Leaders.

Thomas J. Lynch, a prominent Democrat in Augusta, Me., said:

"The action of the Democratic State Committee of Massachusetts in indorsing Governor Foss for the Presidency pleases me very much. I regard him as the strongest candidate in New England and it seems to me the New England States would stand by him as unit. He has certainly demonstrated his strength even in the Republican strongholds of the Bay State."

City Treasurer Niles L. Perkins of Augusta said:

"He has done great work against heavy odds, and if a man was to be picked from anywhere in New England I cannot conceive of his being other than Governor Foss. I do not think people in Maine have generally slated him for the first position, but many, like myself, have all along thought it more than likely that he would be honored with the second place on the Presidential ticket. I believe Governor Foss as a candidate for the top of the ticket, however, would command the votes of all the delegates of the New England States."

David J. Barry of Providence, who is likely to be a delegate to the convention, remarked:

"Foss a Great Man."

"Governor Foss is a great man. If you eliminate the geographical question in relation to his candidacy then you have a Democratic nominee who will fill the Presidential bill this year. I do not see way there could not be a Foss delegation from every New England State."

John J. Fitzgerald, also a probable delegate to the National convention from Rhode Island, said:

"Governor Foss is a wonder. He makes the right kind of a campaign and he's a good man for any office in the gift of the Democrats. If the demand comes strong and he proves the right candidate, then New England ought to indorse him."

Frank A. Morey, Mayor of Lewiston and Speaker of the last Maine House of Representatives, said concerning the candidacy of Governor Foss:

"He has made a splendid executive, and I should consider him a strong candidate for a place on the ticket, either first or second. He made a great fight in Massachusetts, and the people of that State evidently have perfect confidence in him."

F. X. Belleau, clerk of courts of Androscoggin County and a leading French Democrat, said:

"If Governor Foss means to be a candidate for the presidency I believe he can get a solid New England delegation. New England could be proud of him as a candidate. He is a very able man and would make a strong President."

Indorsement of Foss.

Former Mayor Eugene E. Reed of Manchester, N. H., Democratic National Committeeman, said:

"I have no knowledge that New Hampshire Democrats are committed in any way to any of the several Presidential candidates. The action of the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee in formally presenting the name of Governor Eugene N. Foss as a Presidential candidate should and no doubt will prove a stimulus to the Democracy in New England."

In an editorial to-day the Portland Argus says Governor Foss is now one of the favorite sons, and that if he failed to be placed at the head of the ticket his ambition might be satisfied with the second place. The Argus adds that his push and ability will make him a political factor to be reckoned with in the future.

James Maxwell, chairman of the Board of Aldermen of Portland, declared:

"I have long been an admirer of Governor Foss. I like his blunt, honest, direct way of getting at things, and should be very glad to see him the Presidential candidate.

DR. ALLEN STIRS SUFFRAGISTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Suffragists are indignantly discussing the attack of Dr. William H. Allen, director of the Bureau of Municipal Research, in his book entitled "Women's Part in Government," extracts from which have been printed.

Mrs. Ida Husted Harper denounced Dr. Allen's anti-suffrage sentiments as an insult to womanhood. Referring to his statement that "No woman has a right to be a problem or a problem creator," Mrs. Harper sarcastically remarked:

"No woman is a problem to other women. If men cannot understand her, that is their misfortune, and she is not to blame for it. Do not try to make her less of a problem, but try to give men more sense.

"What Dr. Allen says relating to woman's suffrage simply carries out what he always says when referring to that subject. He never opens his mouth on it without insulting womanhood.

Says Antis Insult Women.

"I noticed the anti-suffragists contemplate using that part of his book which relates to suffrage as part of their suffrage campaign literature. Let us hope they do. It will fit in nicely with the rest of what they send out.

"Women who like to be insulted should not be denied the privilege, and I never knew of an anti-suffrage writer or speaker who does not always insult women, singly and collectively."

In answer to Dr. Allen's expressed fear that "Getting out the full woman's vote will be no small problem," Mrs. Harper retorted:

"Dr. Allen probably meant the woman's full vote being no small problem. He might recall the recent election in Los Angeles, where 40,000 registered men failed to vote and 95 per cent. of the registered women went to the polls."

Referring to the question put by Dr. Allen in citing the problems that will confront the woman voter, saying: "Did you ever know a fallen hero in politics whom large numbers of women did not enthusiastically support?" Mrs. Harper sarcastically answered:

How Women Have Voted.

"Yes, I have known a great many. The women of Seattle, for instance, did not very enthusiastically support Mayor Gill after they had helped him to take a heavy fall from his exalted office."

Referring to present suffrage campaign methods, Dr. Allen, among other raps at the suffragists, says:

"Shooting up a town is disorder, whether the shooter-up is male or female, drunk with suffrage or with alcohol."

"I see no reason for making such a statement," said Mrs. Harper. "It would be a waste of time to discuss it. To discuss it would be to descend to the level of the author, which no self-respecting suffragist would care to do."

QUITE A WHILE SINCE LAST YEAR! How are the resolutions holding out? T. E. Powers has drawn some New Year's Resolutions pictures for the Sunday AMERICAN. They are drawn in the conservative, serious, gloomy manner for which Mr. Powers is famous from ocean to ocean.

COPLEY SOCIETY TO HOLD ARTISTS' FETE

The next artists' festival of the Copley Society will be held on the evening of January 11 in Copley Hall. The subject of the evening will be a feast in Babylon at the time of the return of Tiglath-Pileser II. from the Conquest of Syria, 750 B. C., and the costumes will be limited to those worn at that epoch. The scene will be the hanging gardens of Queen Semiramis, opening upon the temple of the gods, and every person that enters the portals of Copley Hall on the night of the entertainment must be garbed in the picturesquely scant attire of the period.

Violet's sister, was engaged, will be another important witness for the State. District Attorney Pelletier yesterday sent him a summons to appear, together with a writ of protection from any suits which might be brought against him during the time he is in this State as a witness. Mr. Holt is at present in Vermont. He will return to Jamestown next week, when the summons and writ will be handed to him.

Attorneys Lee and Morse steadfastly refuse to discuss their plans for the defence of the accused pastor.

As a result of the conference at the jail, however, the impression grew to-day that the lawyers for the clergyman had reached this decision:

First, that no extension of time for the beginning of the trial would be asked, and it would go on a week from next Monday, unless the government proposes a delay.

Second, that no change of any importance would be made from the line of defence decided upon before Richeson's attack on himself.

Another rumor that was generally credited among those in touch with the preparations for the trial was that Miss Violet Edmands had so far recovered her health that she would be able to attend the trial and testify for the defence.

At the jail to-day it was said that Richeson was in fine condition, considering what he had recently gone through. He is up and dressed and walks about the large room on the second floor. He is more cheerful, also, than he has been for some time.

The clergyman, it is said, looked forward with much eagerness to the visit of his lawyers, especially Mr. Lee, who spent the holidays in Virginia at his home, which is near that of Richeson's father, Varland Richeson.

Lee Talks of Richeson.

In discussing Mr. Richeson's condition, Attorney Lee said:

"He has changed greatly since I last saw him. It would be difficult to imagine him the same man I talked with three weeks ago.

"He appeared wan and weak, and he gave evidences of the suffering he had endured in more ways than one.

"It was very apparent that he is weak; weak physically, and naturally this physical weakness is reflected in his mental capacity.

"While Mr. Morse and I were talking with him in regard to the case, we could easily discern the weakness coming over him, and after about half an hour we desisted in our discussion of the case. It would have been brutal, to my way of thinking, to subject him to further interrogation."

"Did Mr. Richeson's condition impress you as such as to preclude the possibility of his going to trial on January 15?" Mr. Lee was asked.

"I am not a physician, and consequently I do not consider myself qualified to judge of the improvement that might be made between now and the date set for trial, but, personally, at the present time, and in his present condition, it is my opinion that Mr. Richeson would not be able to endure thirty minutes on the witness stand.

Richeson May Gain Strength.

"However, his condition might improve rapidly during the remaining week and a half, so that I would not care to discuss or make any forecast or prophecy upon his state of health on January 15."

Mr. Morse, upon his return to his office after his visit to the jail, said:

"Mr. Lee and myself visited our client in the Charles Street Jail and had an extended conversation with him. We found him sitting up in a chair dressed. He was unable to walk unassisted, but after talking with him for a while it was apparent to us that he was exhausted and we deemed it advisiable not to discuss the case any longer. We then changed our conversation to general matters."

Mr. Morse attributed Richeson's mental weakness to his physical condition.

Dr. Howard A. Lothrop, the surgeon who has been in daily attendance upon Richeson since he inflicted the wounds upon himself, two weeks ago, said his condition was very satisfactory.

"He is getting along splendidly," said Dr. Lothrop, "and his condition is as good as could possibly be hoped. He has been walking for the past few days, and there does not appear to be any lameness."

Harrison Out of Case.

Beverly R. Harrison, the Virginia lawyer, who came North with Mr. Lee on the latter's first visit, will probably not figure in the case any further. Mr. Lee said that Mr. Harrison was occupied in legal affairs in the South and he did not expect him to come to Boston again. Mr. Harrison was engaged by Thomas Richeson, father of the defendant.

Mr. Lee said to-day, "During my late stay in Virginia, I had two or three talks with Richeson's father, relative to his son's coming trial. He will return to Boston for the trial, but I do not know just when he will come. I have not seen the Edmands family since returning and I do not know what their opinions are.

"I do not like to say it, but to my mind it will be a brutal thing to do to force Mr. Richeson to go through this ordeal of a trial for life on the date now fixed, unless he has made a wonderful change for the better by January 15. Of course, they can bring him back and forth in a carriage and put him into a chair to listen to the affecting details of the trial, but being thoroughly square and fair does not seem to me to correspond with making a man only a short time out of the shadow of death appear at a trial when he is not able to walk.

"As to whether I have made a request to have a doctor for the defence examine Mr. Richeson with a view to postponing the trial, I can only say I have not. Mr. Morse may have done so, but he has not informed me of it."

SOUTHERLAND WEDDING DAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3.—The chief New Year's function in which local and Boston society is interested, is the wedding, to-day, of Miss Mary Southerland, daughter of Rear Admiral H. H. Southerland, U. S. N., and Mrs. Southerland, to Louis Bacon of Boston, Harvard graduate, stock broker, member of the Tennis and Raquet and the Eastern Yacht Clubs.

The ceremony was celebrated in the Church of the Covenant.

The bride is a close friend and companion of Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the President, who tendered Miss Southerland a dinner on December 22, to which the elite of Washington society were invited.

It was only last year that the bride-to-be was an attendant at the marriage of Countess Luise Alexandra von Bernstorff, daughter of the German Ambassador and the Countess von Bernstorff, to Count Pourtales, an attache of the German Embassy.

Miss Southerland is a member of the younger set in Washington society and has always taken a leading part in all the society functions. A dinner and dance was tendered her by Mrs. William F. Draper, widow of General W. F. Draper, former Ambassador to Italy.

Many dinners, luncheons and other fetes, followed in succession since the announcement of the engagement of Miss Southerland to Louis Bacon.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Francis E. (Crowninshield) Bacon. Following the engagement of the young couple, Mr. Bacon paid an extensive visit to the home of the Southerland family, who were occupying apartments at the Connecticut.

WOBURN CAR MEN TO DANCE TO-NIGHT

The fifth annual concert and ball of the Woburn division of the Bay State Street Railway employes will be held this evening at Lyceum Hall in that city. This year marks the passing of the present superintendent of the division, Albert E. Meyers, and the coming of his successor, Eugene Donavon of Salem. Mr. Meyers has been promoted to the office of superintendent of the Reading division. The dance committee consists of John E. Connolly, chairman; E. J. McDonough, James Maguire, John J. Regan, H. E. Praria, Thomas J. Sweeney, Alfred Madsen and Louis P. Jones.

FORWARD FUND WORK RENEWED

The second campaign to raise $15,000 for the Men and Religion Forward Movement begins this noon at the Boston City Club. Over one-third, or $5,172, has been raised. With this amount in hand the fund committee took a recess for the holidays, with a vote to begin the second campaign for the fund on January 3. Meanwhile the collecting teams have been increased from five to ten, with ten men on a team. This makes a total of 100 men undertaking the collection of the remaining less than $10,000.

GENERAL REYES IS SERIOUSLY ILL

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 3.—General Bernardo Reyes, who was taken a military prisoner in Neuvo Leon on Christmas Day, has contracted malarial fever in Santiago prison, where he is confined, and his condition to-day was said to be serious. The general's advanced age is against rapid recovery.

NEW YORK MAN KILLS BERKSHIRE WILDCAT

LENOX, Jan. 3.—A wildcat that has been the terror of New Marlboro in southern Berkshire for a year has been killed by Dewees W. Dilworth, son of Joseph R. Dilworth of No. 50 West Forty-seventh street, New York. Mr. Dilworth has been spending the holidays with Hildreth K. Bloodgood at Mepal Manor, Mr. Bloodgood's country place in New Marlboro.

great pitcher and we have great hopes of him."

"Stahl and I are sure to get along nicely together," said Mr. McRoy. "I have known Stahl for a good many years and we have been very close together. I was a schoolmate of Mrs. Stahl.

How Stahl Came to Boston.

"In fact, I was the one who introduced Stahl into professional baseball. In 1902 Henry Killilea, then president of the Boston Americans, came to the office of the Chicago Americans and told me that Alex Smith had broken a finger and that the Bostons had been left without a good man to fill his place behind the bat. He asked me if I knew of anyone he could get to replace Smith.

"I told him there was a likely youngster at the University of Illinois and that he would play in a game that afternoon against Northwestern University. It was Stahl to whom I referred. So Killilea and I went out to see the game.

"Stahl showed up in fine form that day, knocking two home runs, two triples and a single. Killilea, who was highly pleased at Stahl's work, signalled to him during the game. He asked Stahl how he would like to join the Boston Americans.

"'I have been thinking of entering professional baseball,' Stahl told him. 'In fact, Selee of the Chicago Nationals has asked me to play with his team.' Stahl said he would call up Selee to see if he would meet Killilea's offer. Selee answered back: 'Will meet your terms.' Then Selee wired to Jim Hart, president of the Chicago Nationals, who was at Cincinnati, and Hart wired to Stahl: 'You are our man.'

"This displeased Stahl. 'No one owns me,' he said. 'I will play with the Bostons.'

"You see, this happened during the war times. Stahl had been asked to play with the Chicago Nationals, but he had not agreed to, nor had he been offered a contract. And the Chicagos come along and say 'He's our man' when someone else wants him. That is the way they did things during the war days.

"Well, Stahl came to Boston and made good. I do not believe the story of how he came here was ever told before."

MAGNIFICENT CAR TO CARRY EDISON

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—To induce Thomas A. Edison to attend its banquet in Chicago, the Western Electrical Association sent a special Pullman car to Orange, N. J., to transport the inventor to the western city. Mr. Edison consented to go, under the circumstances. The car is equipped with all the most up-to-date electrical equipments, has a series of staterooms, drawing rooms, and a fine dining room. One of the best chefs that could be obtained in New York was assigned to the car. Mr. Edison, his wife, daughter and secretary left Orange to-day. The banquet will take place on Friday night.

A Satiny Complexion and Beautiful Hair

(Mrs. B. R. in Vernon's.)

"Rough and red skin, chaps and cold sores are the bane of women in Winter. To get rid of these, apply Mother's Salve before retiring. It is a splendid remedy for pimples, eczema and other skin afflictions, and has no equal in healing old sores, burns, scalds and cuts.

"A better protection than powder for the complexion is to rub the face, neck and arms gently with a solution made by dissolving an original package of mayatone in half a pint of witch hazel. It will not rub off or show and makes the skin soft, satiny and pliable, and prevents growth of hair.

"Don't catch cold washing your head. To make a dry shampoo that will clean the scalp and hair, put a cupful of corn meal in a fruit jar, add the contents of an original package of therox, and shake well. Sprinkle a spoonful on the head and brush through the hair. It will leave the hair light and fluffy and heighten its original color."

SICK HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, TORPID LIVER, CONSTIPATION—CASCARETS.

Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous matter, instead of being thrown out, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, awful, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making the poison move on and out and purifying the blood. The effect is almost instantaneous. Ladies whose sensitive organs are especially prone to sick headaches, need not suffer, for they can be quickly cured by Cascarets. One taken tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box means a clear head and perfect health for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle, cleansing, too. Children gladly take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

TAFT SAYS HE'S IN FIGHT TO STAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—President Taft is in the race to stay. No influence whatever can induce him to withdraw from the presidential fight, whether it be in favor of Roosevelt, La Follette or some unnamed possibility.

This much was positively asserted by the friends with whom the President talked to-day. The President believes the country will indorse his administration, and further believes that the Republican party cannot repudiate him. This is the substance of the statement made by the President to his callers to-day. To one of them he is reported to have said:

"I am in this fight and expected to stay in it to the finish, unless death should interfere."

Senator La Follette was due to arrive in Chicago to-day, and the politicians waited to hear from his own lips whether the statement sent from Grand Rapids that the Wisconsin man was about to withdraw from the presidential race in favor of Colonel Roosevelt was true.

His friends, many of whom have practically staked their political future on the success of La Follette for the presidency, refused to believe that he could so late in the day "quit cold" and step out of the way of the Roosevelt boom.

His friends say Senator La Follette has become convinced during his speech-making tour of the last week in Ohio and Michigan that a progressive Republican can win in the national convention next June and defeat Taft.

If the progressives are divided Taft will win.

NEW YORK STATE LEGISLATURE MEETS

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—The New York State Legislature convened to-day for its 135th session. The Republicans are supreme in the Assembly, while the Democrats hold the reins in the Senate. For the first time on record a Socialist sat in the Assembly. He is Herbert M. Merrill of Schenectady. Governor Dix in his annual message to the Legislature makes a strong plea for the enactment of amendments to the direct nomination and primary laws. He thinks all members of the State committees should be elected at the Spring primaries, and that membership of the State committees should be enlarged by law to include a representative from each Assembly district. Governor Dix strongly favors passage of a law that shall prevent the buying and selling of votes.

BIG STRIKE OF COAL MINERS IS HALTED

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 3.—Plans for an immediate strike of coal miners in the anthracite region were halted to-day by a conference of local and national officials of the Mine Workers' Union, at which it was decided to postpone definite action until after the national convention of miners in Indianapolis, January 16. The chief demands of the miners are: Official recognition of their union by the companies; payment by weight instead of by carloads for coal mined; collection of union dues by companies; eight-hour work day; abolition of conciliation board.

TAKE ALLEGED HOLD-UP MAN

Charged with being the man who held up seventeen-year-old Grace Young of Lynn Saturday night, robbing her of her week's wages at the point of a loaded revolver, James Capsan, aged twenty-three, was placed under arrest by the Lynn police to-day. Capsan is a comparative stranger in that city.

In addition to the robbery of Miss Young, who was held up at 11 o'clock when about to enter home at No. 92 Hamilton avenue, Capsan is charged with being the man who held up Emma Newth of Lynn earlier the same night. He will be taken before both young women for identification.

HAIL MRS. WILSON AS AMERICAN BEAUTY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Huntington Wilson, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, is regarded as the purest type of American beauty in Washington. She wins this title through the fact that she is known as "the woman with the chiselled features." This is distinctly an American type as opposed to the moulded features which is the English viewpoint of great beauty.

FIRE HORSES RUN AWAY; TWO HURT

The first accident in the fire department since the Hyde Park department became a part of the Boston department occurred to-day when Charles Windless, fifty-four, driver for Chemical No. 14, and Joseph F. May, twenty-eight, a probationary man in the service, were thrown from an exercising wagon, which had dashed into a telegraph pole after the horses became unmanageable.

Windless was rendered unconscious. He was hurried to the Lynnwood street hospital, Hyde Park, where he was found to be suffering from a bad cut on the head. It is feared that his skull is fractured. May got a bad shaking up and was given medical treatment.

When the horses struck the pole the centre pole of the wagon snapped and one of the rear wheels flew off. This caused the horses to prance in the street for awhile and then dash madly into Cleary square, where they were captured by Thomas Griffin and Austin W. Ford.

Call Fort Hill 7600

If you want to change your present telephone service to any of the different classes of District Measured Service, the excess rates of which were reduced Jan. 1.

If the changes can be effected in time, the correct listing will appear in the next issue of the Telephone Directory, now going to press. If there is a telephone at your elbow, act promptly. There will be no charge for a call to this number from any telephone or Pay Station in the Metropolitan District.

Two typical illustrations will demonstrate the application of this reduction:

1. In the Central District, all calls in excess of the 960 for $48 over a one-party business line, will be three cents each, whether made to the seven Central District exchanges or to any of the twenty-five Suburban exchanges within an eight-mile radius. Prior to this reduction such excess calls to any of these twenty-five Suburban exchanges cost five cents each.

2. In the different Suburban districts, all calls in excess of the 480 for $24, over a two-party residence line, will be three cents each, whether made to exchanges within the exchange district or to Central or other Suburban District exchanges within an eight-mile radius of the calling exchange. Prior to this reduction, calls to exchanges outside the exchange district but within an eight-mile radius of the calling exchange, cost five cents each.

This reduction applies not only to the two specific schedules used for illustration, but to all Central District or Suburban District measured service rates, and virtually makes a measured service zone within which all excess calls to any Metropolitan exchange within an eight-mile radius of the calling exchange may be had for three cents each.

MRS. PARK DEFENDS COLLEGE GIRLS

Radcliffe Graduate Denies That Women's Colleges Are "Old Maid Factories."

By SYBIL WARNE.

"Women's colleges, old maid factories, eh?

Oh, not at all.

Dr. Sprague of Amherst Agricultural College, in making such a statement you have made a whirlwind.

Mrs. Charles Park, a Radcliffe graduate, who scouts the idea of Dr. Sprague of Amherst Agricultural College that women's colleges are "old maid factories."

You might have said this fifty years ago with impunity, but you cannot say it to-day. You're off your trolley.

Mrs. Charles Park a graduate of Radcliffe College, prominent in this city in advocating a new mission for women, says some one has thrown much dust into the doctor's eyes.

What woman is getting from a college education is a trained mind, she asserts.

A college bred woman makes the best suggestions to her husband.

She can help him out of his difficulties more effectively than to have him go to some man and confide in him.

A college education makes a woman independent. She may marry if she pleases.

It does not make a woman think less of home life, but makes her better equipped for her home life.

She can devise new methods of washing the dishes.

She can plan with her knowledge of mathematics to keep the bookkeeper at the grocery store upon "pins and needles."

She can argue with the landlord and put up a good case for back rent.

She can settle all disputes that her husband cannot settle.

"Women's colleges old-maid factories. Well! indeed, this is amusing," humorously declared Mrs. Park when shown the report of Dr. Robert S. I. Sprague of Amherst Agricultural College, before a select body of educators a short time ago.

"Giving Trained Minds."

"I do not see how any man living in this progressive twentieth century was allow himself to have the dust thrown into his eyes in this shape. You must pity such men who make these assertions. They are evidently rasping under some difficulty, and they do not know how to get the best of it except by making some such nonsensical remark as this.

"Women's colleges are anything but old maids' factories. What woman is getting from college life to-day is a train d mind. I am speaking from some experience because I have spent four years in college and what I have gained from a college course is what thousands of other women have gained.

"A college education does not make us think any of the less of home life. In fact the college educated woman is thinking more than ever of it and when it falls to her lot to establish a home of her own she is equipped for that duty.

"Women do not think less of matrimony because they have a college education. They are not, however, dependent upon it.

"The thoughtful woman of to-day who has back of her a college education knows how to handle the difficulties of home life with better judgment than her sister who has not had this advantage.

"Then think what a great assistance she can be to her husband, when she can put her training in college to advantage in her own home and does not need to go to her husband with every trifling difficulty for solution.

"There are many women who go into business after they have finished their college course, but three-fourths of them do not. Those who do go into business feel for a time that they should put their education to some practical test.

Talks It Over With His Wife.

"But who makes a better wife to-day than the college bred woman. Who can make more helpful suggestions to her husband? Who can more wisely assist him in solving his problem?

Instead of a man going to some other man with his business to talk over let him confide with his wife and with her trained judgment and skill she can help him to see some way out of his problem.

"In married life, it is no longer the sway of the husband over the wife, but it is the co-operation of them both in the common work of making the home life ideal.

"A woman may marry a college-bred man, but if she is college bred herself think what a home can be made for the children to be born to them.

"Suppose that there are more unappropriated women in Boston than in any other city because it is claimed we put a higher estimate upon education than elsewhere, is that any reason for slurring a college education for women?

"You might as well call colleges for men old bachelors' factories because so many men after leaving college go into clubs and remain single until they see their mistake.

"If a woman becomes more particular in selecting her mate for life because she has an education back of her, do you blame her? Many women rush into matrimony thoughtlessly, and if a college education can prevent this, as I think it will help womankind to think more seriously about it, why is it not a great benefit?

"But no man really objects to the higher education of woman to-day. That matter was threshed out years ago, and thousands of mothers and fathers are sacrificing their own interests and sending their girls to college to-day.

"If Dr. Sprague has three daughters, or even one, in his family, and watches their growth and progress in his own family and wants them to be of service to the world would he not in every way encourage their education even to the sending of them to college?

"Women are getting more education than they formerly did, consequently are proving themselves worthy of it in many ways. They make the mothers who will love their homes, who will sacrifice everything for them and in defending them they will be able to show usefulness of their college or high school training.

"Education does not make women old maidish. It makes them take a larger and more intelligent interest in life and keeps the men up to a higher standard of living."

NATION AWAITS FOSS INAUGURAL

Governor Foss's campaign for the Democratic nomination for President will start with an aggressive, nation-wide swing when to-morrow he delivers his inaugural message, taking the gubernatorial chair for his second term.

The message is expected to be a bugle blast that will be heard across the continent. From the moment that document, upon which the Governor has spent a good deal of time and thought, reaches the public, his fight will be on. Political leaders all over the country are watching the Bay State Governor.

Governor Foss always fights expecting to win. His star has not failed him so far, nor has he lost faith in it. Between now and the holding of the next Democratic national convention the Governor of Massachusetts will command national attention.

Flocking, to Foss Standard.

Following the action of the Democratic State Committee in indorsing Governor Foss for the nomination, his friends have begun to flock to his standard.

Dispatches from Philadelphia to-day declared a prominent politician had discussed plans to bring forth Foss as a dark horse in the Democratic National Committee meeting in Washington next Monday.

Former Congressman Joseph H. O'Neil declared to-day that New England Democrats should stand by Governor Foss and make his candidacy an assured success. He said:

"I hope to see the leading Democrats of the State take hold of the Foss boom and push it for all it is worth. Governor Foss certainly deserves every honor that the Democrats of the State can give him. If New England goes to the National convention practically a unit for Governor Foss it will make a fine showing and the rest of the country will be obliged to sit up and take notice.

"Governor Foss's administration of State affairs has been on a high plane, liberal, and in the interest of the plain people. The party will make no mistake in backing the Governor and I wish him every success if he is a candidate for the honor."

Many expressions of opinion have been obtained in various New England cities. Some of these follow:

Views of Some Leaders.

Thomas J. Lynch, a prominent Democrat in Augusta, Me., said:

"The action of the Democratic State Committee of Massachusetts in indorsing Governor Foss for the Presidency pleases me very much. I regard him as the strongest candidate in New England and it seems to me the New England States would stand by him as unit. He has certainly demonstrated his strength even in the Republican strongholds of the Bay State."

City Treasurer Niles L. Perkins of Augusta said:

"He has done great work against heavy odds, and if a man was to be picked from anywhere in New England I cannot conceive of his being other than Governor Foss. I do not think people in Maine have generally slated him for the first position, but many, like myself, have all along thought it more than likely that he would be honored with the second place on the Presidential ticket. I believe Governor Foss as a candidate for the top of the ticket, however, would command the votes of all the delegates of the New England States."

David J. Barry of Providence, who is likely to be a delegate to the convention, remarked:

"Foss a Great Man."

"Governor Foss is a great man. If you eliminate the geographical question in relation to his candidacy then you have a Democratic nominee who will fill the Presidential bill this year. I do not see why there could not be a Foss delegation from every New England State."

John J. Fitzgerald, also a probable delegate to the National convention from Rhode Island, said:

"Governor Foss is a wonder. He makes the right kind of a campaign and he's a good man for any office in the gift of the Democrats. If the demand comes strong and he proves the right candidate, then New England ought to indorse him."

Frank A. Morey, Mayor of Lewiston and Speaker of the last Maine House of Representatives, said concerning the candidacy of Governor Foss:

"He has made a splendid executive, and I should consider him a strong candidate for a place on the ticket, either first or second. He made a great fight in Massachusetts, and the people of that State evidently have perfect confidence in him."

F. X. Belleau, clerk of courts of Androscoggin County and a leading French Democrat, said:

"If Governor Foss means to be a candidate for the presidency I believe he can get a solid New England delegation. New England could be proud of him as a candidate. He is a very able man and would make a strong President."

Indorsement of Foss.

Former Mayor Eugene E. Reed of Manchester, N. H., Democratic National Committeeman, said:

"I have no knowledge that New Hampshire Democrats are committed in any way to any of the several Presidential candidates. The action of the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee in formally presenting the name of Governor Eugene N. Foss as a Presidential candidate should and no doubt will prove a stimulus to the Democracy in New England."

In an editorial to-day the Portland Argus says Governor Foss is now one of the favorite sons, and that if he failed to be placed at the head of the ticket his ambition might be satisfied with the second place. The Argus adds that his push and ability will make him a political factor to be reckoned with in the future.

James Maxwell, chairman of the Board of Aldermen of Portland, declared:

"I have long been an admirer of Governor Foss. I like his blunt, honest, direct way of getting at things, and should be very glad to see him the Presidential candidate."

DR. ALLEN STIRS SUFFRAGISTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Suffragists are indignantly discussing the attack of Dr. William H. Allen, director of the Bureau of Municipal Research, in his book entitled "Women's Part in Government," extracts from which have been printed.

Mrs. Ida Husted Harper denounced Dr. Allen's anti-suffrage sentiments as an insult to womanhood. Referring to his statement that "No woman has a right to be a problem or a problem creator," Mrs. Harper sarcastically remarked:

"No woman is a problem to other women. If men cannot understand her, that is their misfortune, and she is not to blame for it. Do not try to make her less of a problem, but try to give man more sense.

"What Dr. Allen says relating to woman's suffrage simply carries out what he always says when referring to that subject. He never opens his mouth on it without insulting womanhood.

Says Antis Insult Women.

"I noticed the anti-suffragists contemplate using that part of his book which relates to suffrage as part of their suffrage campaign literature. Let us hope they do. It will fit in nicely with the rest of what they send out.

"Women who like to be insulted should not be denied the privilege, and I never knew of an anti-suffrage writer or speaker who does not always insult women, singly and collectively."

In answer to Dr. Allen's expressed fear that "Getting out the full woman's vote will be no small problem," Mrs. Harper retorted:

"Dr. Allen probably meant the woman's full vote being no small problem. He might recall the recent election in Los Angeles, where 40,000 registered men failed to vote and 95 per cent. of the registered women went to the polls."

Referring to the question put by Dr. Allen in citing the problems that will confront the woman voter, saying: "Did you ever know a fallen hero in politics whom large numbers of women did not enthusiastically support?" Mrs. Harper sarcastically answered:

How Women Have Voted.

"Yes, I have known a great many. The women of Seattle, for instance, did not very enthusiastically support Mayor Gill after they had helped him to take a heavy fall from his exalted office."

Referring to present suffrage campaign methods, Dr. Allen, among other raps at the suffragists, says:

"Shooting up a town is disorder, whether the shooter-up is male or female, drunk with suffrage or with alcohol."

"I see no reason for making such a statement," said Mrs. Harper. "It would be a waste of time to discuss it. To discuss it would be to descend to the level of the author, which no self-respecting suffragist would care to do."

COPLEY SOCIETY TO HOLD ARTISTS' FETE

The next artists' festival of the Copley Society will be held on the evening of January 11 in Copley Hall. The subject of the evening will be a feast in Babylon at the time of the return of Tiglath-Pileser II. from the Conquest of Syria, 750 B. C., and the costumes will be limited to those worn at that epoch. The scene will be the hanging gardens of Queen Semiramis, opening upon the temple of the gods, and every person that enters the portals of Copley Hall on the night of the entertainment must be garbed in the picturesquely scant attire of the period.

scattered under different departments. Under this bureau might well be placed the inspection of factories, the management of the free employment bureaus, and the supervision of employment offices."

The Senate met at 11:05. Clerk Henry D. Coolidge, who entered on his twenty-fifth consecutive year of service, called the body to order. Among the forty Senators wer four absentees, Hersey of Plymouth, Powers and Timilty of Boston, and Quigley of Holyoke.

The galleries were jammed with spectators, including many women. On the desks of Senators Horgan of Boston, Greenwood (later to be elected president), Joyce of Brockton, Powers of Boston and Bennett of Saugus were bouquets and baskets of flowers.

Senior Senator-elect George A. Schofield of Ipswich, who was in the Senate in 1906, was called to the chair. The Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College, delivered a prayer, which was not only the longest ever offered at such an occasion, but was particularly eloquent. The prayer was:

The Prayer.

"We pray Thee, O, Almighty and Eternal God, who alone canst guide a nation in the way of true prosperity and abiding happiness to bestow upon us the people of the United States Thy special protection and fostering care that our land may be fruitful in fullest measure, that our citizens may enjoy the deepest happiness, and that we may lead the nations of the world in the paths of personal and domestic integrity, civic freedom, of national concord and of universal peace.

"We pray thee, O God of might, and wisdom and justice, through whom authority is rightly administered, laws are enacted, and judgment decreed, assist with Thy Holy Spirit of counsel and fortitude the President of this great Republic, the Governors of the several States especially the Governor of Massachusetts, all rulers of cities and of towns especially in this Commonwealth, that their administration may be conducted in righteousness and may be of eminent service to the people over whom they preside by encouraging due respect for virtue and religion; by a faithful execution of the laws in justice and mercy; and by restraining vice and immorality.

May Thy divine light direct the deliberations of Congress, of all legislative assemblies, but especially of this body of esteemed and honored senators, that Thy beneficent wisdom may shine forth in all the proceedings and laws framed for our rule and government; so that these laws may tend to the preservation of peace, the promotion of national happiness, the increase of industry, of commerce and of useful knowledge, and may perpetuate to all who dwell within our borders and to those who seek our shores the blessings of equal liberty and of true government by the people.

"May these revered men whom the citizens have chosen to sit in this sacred assembly ever remember that they are the champions of civil liberty and the protectors of the people's rights; may they encourage every legitimate aspiration of the leaders of commerce and industry; secure that recompense to the toiler which reason and justice demand for human labor and for the outpouring of human energies, may they all work in perfect harmony to win the greatest good for the greatest number of our people, so that all citizens may realize that with this body of upright men their rights are absolutely safe and their possession absolutely secure, that this revered State House is indeed the temple of freedom and the members of this honored assembly are indeed the fearless protectors of the people.

"To Thy boundless mercy O God of goodness, we recommend all our brethren and fellow citizens that they may be blessed in the observance of the laws of God and of the State, and that after enjoying the blessing of this life they may be admitted to those which are eternal."

Election of a President.

At 11:17 Governor Foss and the new Council-elect came in, escorted by Sergeant-at-Arms Pedrick, and administered the oath of office to the Senators. The Governor and Council left the Senate chamber at 11:27, amid applause from floor and galleries.

The Senate proceeded to ballot for a president, the matter having been previously settled in caucus of Republican Senators the night before. The vote:

George A. Schofield of Ipswich (D)	10
Francis X. Quigley of Holyoke (D)	1

Senator McCarthy of Boston (D) moved that the election be made unanimous. The motion went on record, but no action could be taken, as it was out of order. It was interesting, however, as indicating the willingness of the Democrats to declare a Republican president the unanimous choice.

President Greenwood accepted the office with the shortest speech on record. It was so brief that, when he closed, it came abruptly to the assembly.

The Senate re-elected Clerk Coolidge, Sergeant-at-Arms Thomas F. Pedrick and Chaplain the Rev. Edward A. Horton. President Greenwood announced his committees and, at 12:20, the Senate adjourned to 11 a. m. to-morrow.

Mourn Hancock's Death.

In the House there was a note of sadness over the news of the death of Representative Portus B. Hancock of Brockton, the oldest member in point of years, who was re-elected to the new Legislature. Mr. Hancock was known all over the State House as "Port." He was a whole-souled, genial man, and so true to his district that he was considered sure of election as long as he cared to run. It was his ambition to become dean of the House, and only one member was ahead of his for that modest title.

The House formally organized at 11:20. Clerk James W. Kimball called the 240 Representatives to order. He read that section of the Massachusetts Constitution which provides that the senior Representative shall act as Speaker until the permanent speaker is elected.

The House records showed that Representative Harry M. Eames of Andover is senior member, having been in the 1887 Legislature from Lawrence. Representative Eames was called to the Speaker's chair.

He called on his home pastor, the Rev. Frank I. Shipman of South Congregational Church, Andover, to offer prayer. The clergyman invoked the Divine blessing upon the Governor, the Legislature and other State authorities. All members stood while prayer was offered.

Following this a committee was appointed to wait upon the Governor and notify him that the House had convened.

At 11:45 Governor Foss entered the House chamber with the Council and swore in the Representatives.

Vote for Speaker.

The vote on balloting for Speaker was:

Total vote cast	235
Necessary to choice	118
Grafton D. Cushing, Boston (R)	141
Martin M. Lomasney, Boston (D)	91
John F. Meaney, Blackstone (D)	3

Then the Speaker delivered his speech of acceptance and read his committee appointments.

Floral honors in the House to-day were shared by Clan Sullivan.

The desk of Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston was banked high and overflowed with floral tributes from his constituents in Ward 1. There was a large basket of red roses, a basket of carnations and a horseshoe of carnations, with boquets, so many that some were put on the desks of adjoining members.

Roses for Sullivan.

Representative William H. Sullivan of Ward Nineteen received an immense basket of American Beauty roses from "The Guards," a political organization of Ward Nineteen. He also received a boquet of roses and pinks from women in his native place, Stoneham. The Ward nineteen member was rallied a bit about being remembered by his feminine friends.

The Democrats started right in by selecting Martin M. Lomasney of Ward 8, Boston, who came within a few votes last year of capturing the speakership of the House, as the Democratic nominee for the place.

The caucus vote to-day was unanimous. Ninety-six Democrats were present.

The caucus was called to order by Representative Michael J. Reidy of Ward 15, South Boston. Representative Reidy spoke of the need of unity in this year's house on the Democratic end, claiming that the same work which was accomplished last year in the way of passing legislation could again be achieved.

How She Fooled the Doctor

Three years ago my little girl Angela was taken sick with scarlet fever and later dropsy set in; her face and limbs swelled and her eyes puffed. A leading physician here at the time treated her without the slightest success. A sample of your Swamp-Root having been left at the house at the time, I resolved to try it, and as it agreed with her stomach I continued using it with grateful results. The inflammation began to subside after she had taken the first fifty-cent bottle, and after she took two large bottles she was pronounced cured by the doctor and has been in good health ever since. The doctor came to see her every day and examined her every second day until he pronounced her kidneys in perfect condition.

Now, then, the doctor was under the impression that I was giving my girl his medicine, but as his medicine had failed to do a bit of good, and desiring not to offend him, I did not tell him I was giving her Swamp-Root and he did not know the difference. I did not use one drop of his medicine after I started my girl on Swamp-Root, and have always felt that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root saved my girl's life, for which I am grateful.

I cannot praise it too highly.

Very truly,

ROLLING HENRY.

By MORTON BIRGE

We all know Foxy Fitzy's line: 'Tis carolling "Sweet Adeline."
While other pols keep up the pace by kisses on each baby's face
Still others trot from door to door or scatter bounty to the poor.
But here's the latest dazzling dodge of haughty Henry Cabot Lodge.
He builds a roller-skating fence against the need of six years hence.

The sight of Lodge on roller skates would even jar the blase Fates,
And, when the gods see boxwood wheels on lengthy Lodge's learned heels,
Who knoweth what Homeric jest will crack on Friend Olympus's crest?
For Lodge is posted, very much, on heroes, classics, gods and such;
And, in the ancient, baffling Greek, can write and, some say, even speak.

But politics makes funny mates and Lodge breaks out with roller skates,
And so the sage's austere soul is struggling with the "outer roll."
And, while in tariff groups he's missed, he wrestles with the "grapevine twist."
He knows how fun and frolic find high favor in the voter's mind,
And, scorning tunes or babies' pates, he pins his faith on roller skates.

16 MOTHERS FOR MRS. FITZGERALD

In reply to the letter in support of the Public School Association candidates signed and sent to the papers by sixteen Back Bay women, sixteen mothers of children living in various sections of the city sent out a letter to-day endorsing the candidacy of Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald. The letter reads as follows:

To the School Voters' League, Boston, Mass.: We the undersigned, all mothers of children in the public schools, have had our attention called to the letter signed by sixteen women of the Back Bay urging the re-election of Messrs. Brock and Lee to the school committee, and wish to put forward the need for representation of mothers on the school committee in the person of Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald.

We believe that Mrs. Fitzgerald is better acquainted with the needs of the children in the public schools and with the desires of the parents and the conditions under which the teachers are doing their work, than are either of the two gentlemen whom the Back Bay ladies recommend.

We know that Mrs. Fitzgerald has the ability and the experience which would make her a most valuable member of the school committee, and that if she were elected she would strive to make the things which the Back Bay ladies claim to have been done by the School Committee, real achievements.

The Public School Association candidates are recommended by that association in order to keep the schools out of politics. Mrs. Fitzgerald is the only non-partisan candidate in the field and would do more to keep the schools out of politics than could either of these gentlemen who have political indorsements.

Mrs. Ellen Maloney, six children; Mrs Rose E. Murphy, six children; Mrs. Catherine A. Traverse, three children; Mrs. Mary Doyle, two children; Mrs. Hannah Crowley, two children; Mrs. Ida Berkman, five children; Mrs. Lena Greenside, five children; Mrs. Jennie Ampolsky, five children; Mrs. Lena Crystal, two children; Mrs. Fannie Fritz, five children; Mrs. Sarah Coles, three children; Mrs. Leah Levine, four children; Mrs. Isabella H. Anderson, six children; Mrs. Minnie Green, two children; Mrs. Sarah Polak, five children; Mrs. Mary E. O'Connor, three children; total, sixty-four children.

CROCKER SETTLES BOY'S DEATH SUIT

The suit of Michele Nazarro, administrator of the estate of his child, Ricardo Nazzaro, against former City Treasurer George U. Crocker to recover $20,000 for fatal injuries to the boy, which was on trial in the Superior Court, has been settled by the parties. The child was run over by an automobile in Hanover street, October 28, 1909. The machine was owned by the defendant. In it at the time were Mrs. Crocker and her daughter Alma.

TAFT RECONSIDERS HOOK APPOINTMENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—It was learned at the White House to-day that President Taft has reconsidered his determination to appoint Judge William C. Hook to the vacancy on the United States Supreme Court bench, and he again has taken up the recommendations for Judge Francis J. Swayze of New Jersey. This means the President now is considering Judge Hook, Judge Swayze and Secretary Nagel for the place.

GERMANY ASKS AID TO KILL SOCIALISM

Scratching Is Dangerous

People afflicted with eczema and other skin troubles try to get relief by scratching, which not only aggravates the trouble, but also increases the risk of infection. Apply a little Cadum, and the itching will stop. Cadum is soothing and healing to an inflamed, irritated or diseased skin. It is antiseptic, and when applied to a scratch, sore or wound, prevents infection from disease germs. It acts quickly upon eczema, pimples, sores, ulcers, rash, rou skin, scalp sores, ies, etc. Of drug er box.

NOW WHO MAKES BEST MINCE PIE

What should constitute a good mince pie?
This question now causes the government to sigh.
About the ingredients that should be used,
AMERICAN readers may express their views.

Hark ye! Hark ye! All ye masters of ye culinary art. Don't you think that your mince pie recipe contains the proper ingredients, necessary to make the best, old fashioned mince pie. Certainly you do. If you did not, it is a sure thing that you would not make them.

Like everything else, it is no task to make a good mince pie if you know how. That is why the AMERICAN is running this contest. In order that those who do not know how to make a good mince pie may learn. Those housewives who have become famous by their old-fashioned pies can help their fellow-creatures by sending in their recipes to the AMERICAN. Not only will you be giving assistance, but you may also draw one of the prizes. There is one prize of $5 and five of $1 each. Only one side of the paper should be used. Address all recipes to the Mince Pie Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN.

Now is your chance. Do not put it off. Send them in immediately.

Here are a few of the recipes, picked at random:

Four pounds of lean boiled beef, chopped fine, twice as much of chopped green tart apples, one pound of chopped suet, three pounds of raisins, seeded, two pounds of currants, picked over, washed and dried, half pound of citron, cut up fine, one pound of brown sugar, one quart of cooking molasses, two quarts of sweet cider, one pint of boiled cider, one tablespoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of pepper, one tablespoonful mace, one tablespoonful allspice and four tablespoonfuls cinnamon two grated nutmegs, one tablespoonful of cloves. Mix thoroughly and warm on the range until heated through; remove from the fire and when cool stir in a pint of good brandy and one pint of Madeira wine. Put in crock, cover it tightly and set it in a cold place where it will not freeze but keep perfectly cool; will keep all Winter. SUSAN SULLIVAN.
No. 5 Hudson street, Lowell.

Boil one pound beef until tender in enough water to cover. When done take meat and grind fine in chopper, return to liquid and add two quarts apples pared and ground in chopper, one pound of raisins, one pound of currants, one pound orange peel ground fine, one tablespoonful cinnamon, teaspoonful ground clove, one pound light brown sugar, one teaspoonful salt, quart cider and one gill good brandy; put back on range where heat will just reach and simmer one hour; bottle. Pie Crust: two cups flour, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful or level teaspoonful baking powder, mix, then add one cup lard mix all until flakey with silver fork, then add enough cold water to make a sponge; put in ice chest over night, as it makes it nice.

AIRMEN HAVE NEW DISEASE

The advent of each new industry or sport speedily calls the attention of the medical profession to its accompanying ills. This is true of aviation, and the Journal of the American Medical Association publishes an analysis of "aviator's disease," based on the researches of Cruchet and Moulinier, French physicians.

"Almost every occupation has its neurosis, and every new sport adds one to the long list," says the Journal. "Thus we have become familiar with the 'golfer's wrist,' the 'tennis elbow,' and the 'baseball arm' side by side with the 'writer's cramp.' Trades have their dangers and develop new types of disease. The air induces pathologic as well as physiological effects.

"The latest accession to the galaxy of maladies is the mal des aviateurs.

"Professors Cruchet and Moulinier of Bordeaux have recorded the observation which they made at one of the large French meets. They point out that an aeroplane flight calls for a continuous effort, both physical and intellectual, under conditions to which the human organism is not primarily adjusted. An ascent to an altitude of 9,000 feet is accomplished in thirty to forty minutes, and succeeded by a return to earth within five to seven minutes.

"To these speedy ascents and almost dazzling descents, forming the peculiar mechanical features of certain types of flights, are added the rapid changes in barometric pressure, the attendant modifications in the composition of the atmosphere, and the sudden alterations in temperature (from 68 degrees Fahrenheit on the ground to 42 degrees Fahrenheit at 9,000 feet)—a combination of factors, including those to which all workers at high altitudes may be exposed.

"The data collected are as yet too scanty to permit of any elaborate discussion. Certain symptoms are of particular interest. During the ascents shortness of breath may be experienced at relatively low altitudes, accompanied by some acceleration of the pulse. The attendant malaise is not characterized, as a rule, by the intense nausea noticed in mountain climbing; there may be a mild buzzing in the ears, but vertigo has not been reported. Frontal headaches are liable to arise at the altitude of about 4,500 feet. The sensation of cold becomes intense. Irregularities in the voluntary muscular movements or reflex activities are also reported—perhaps the expression of the combined effects of cold, accelerated heart-beat, nervous tension, fatigue, and other factors.

"Descent is usually too rapid to allow an accurate analysis of the sequence of physiologic events. On landing there is an intense sensation of warmth over the surface of the body; the face is flushed; the eyes 'sting.' Headache is accompanied by an almost invincible desire to sleep. Increased blood pressure is quite characteristic on landing from high flights, while severe tachycardia (irregular heart action) may attend fatiguing exhibitions."

WOMAN LENDS "NEW BIBLE" TO SPEAKER OF HOUSE CLARK

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Speaker Champ Clark has received the first volume of what purports to be a new Bible, written by Mrs. Judge, who says she received the inspiration during a nine-year sleep. The revelations cover 400 pages of an ordinary ledger. It is written in script and the authoress says it took her one year to complete it. Included in the revelations are instructions for petrifying and drying ice, so it will resemble popcorn; burning water, making cheese out of straw, shoes out of dog salmon skins, meat of the bark of trees and window panes of frozen air. Mrs Judge informed the speaker that she is known as Irene Love, the prophetess. She said the revelations were to be used for the guidance of the government.

PLAN SAVING OF $50,000,000

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Policies of economy designed to save from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 a year in the conduct of the government will be urged on Congress in the near future in a message which President Taft is preparing. This message will be supplemental to the report of the Economy and Efficiency Commission, which has prepared plans for economies in practically all of the government departments.

HUSBAND AND WIFE JAILED FOR LARCENY

BROCKTON, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Dora Rabinowicz and her husband, Louis Rabinowicz, of No. 118 Lawrence street, were each found guilty in the Police Court on a charge of larceny of 766 pairs of pants and 425 yards of cloth from Isaac Masur, a tailor at No. 63 Franklin street. Each was fined $400 and sentenced to two months in the House of Correction. They claimed a partnership with Masur, the latter, however, producing papers to prove that the partnership had been dissolved.

AN ATLAS THAT SHOWS THINGS

Do you know how big Switzerland is, compared with one of Uncle Sam's States—North Dakota, for instance?

Suppose the country of Germany was slapped down on the map of the United States. How big a patch would Germany make on the Stars and Stripes?

One of the features of the New Census Atlas of the World, which is one of the three books in the AMERICAN'S latest and best coupon offer, is a map of the United States with maps of European powers printed on the United States map in different colors, so as to show just the relative sizes of Uncle Sam, compared with John Bull, et al.

Two other books are in this new offer. One is Croscup's United States History, with synchronic charts, maps and statistical diagrams on the plan of "history made visible." The development of the country is spread before you on a beautifully colored chart, with tables in text to accompany. It is right up to date. It includes President Taft's administration, even up to 1911.

The third book in this new offer is the Modern Universal Encyclopedia, a 625-page volume, bound in limp leather and weighing only thirty ounces, so finely is it made. But it contains over 2,500 pictures and treats over 10,000 subjects. It is an education that can be carried in a child's hand.

Seven AMERICAN coupons of consecutive dates constitute a set, with which you can get one of the books or all three. In addition the cash payment of ninety-five cents extra for the Encyclopedia or the Atlas and eighty-nine cents for the History is required. These sums are insignificant, in comparison with the actual worth of the volumes.

GENIUS, A FLASH IN LIFE, SAYS STAR

Charlotte Walker Praises Author-Husband in Talk on Work, Art and Stage.

By GERTRUDE L. MARVIN.

If you have a pet notion that you can "spot" an actress any time just take a walk through her hotel dining room and try to pick out Charlotte Walker, heroine of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," and wife of its author, Eugene Walters.

In spite of looking at her picture just the last thing before leaving my office, I should have walked straight by her, if Mr. Walters, who had met me in the lobby, had not stopped at her table and introduced me.

It was shortly after noon, and Miss Walker, or Mrs. Walters, as you please, was just breaking her fast. She is a slender bit of pink and whiteness, as dainty and delicate as the proverbial Dresden statuette.

She wears her fair hair drawn back most simply, and her face is as guiltless of make-up as though she were president of a ladies' sewing circle. She was most quietly dressed in a simple white waist which was conspicuous for being really a waist, and not a peek-a-boo

Her hands were bare of rings and bracelets save for her wedding ring, and she wore a string of delicate coral around her neck which matched the delicate flush of pink in her cheeks.

Proud of Her Husband.

Mr. Walters, the successful playwright, and his wife, who was a popular actress before she added to her laurels by appearing in her husband's plays, are an interesting contrast to that similar couple, the Maeterlincks.

Different as the two women are in most ways, they have one trait in common—they both love to talk about their husbands—and oh! how proud they are of them.

I asked Miss Walker if she agreed that genius was merely the result of hard work, and her eyes flashed indignantly.

"Genius has nothing to do with hard work," she replied, "If it had, the amount of hard work I have put into turning ice cream freezers would have me one of the greatest confectioners in the world. And I know all about hard work on the stage, too, such as fifty-two straight weeks of stock company work.

"No, genius is something mysterious that God gives to people in flashes. No one is permanently a genius. For genius is merely the privilege, the capacity of seeing the truth clearly, just in a flash, and only for a second.

"For that second of inspiration, a person is a genius, and then he has to plod along a weary way before another of those flashes. The greatness of the genius depends of the frequency of the flashes."

Wonderful Man to Live With.

Miss Walker was speaking very earnestly, and her eyes searched past the top of the dining room windows, between the grey walls opposite for a glimpse of the blue sky that gives so many inspirations. She seemed off her guard, and I asked her:

"How about your husband?" Instantly her eyes came back down and lit up with happy, tender pride. She started to speak impulsively, and then stopped, suddenly self-conscious.

"Well, of course, I am his wife," she conceded, "but" and this very earnestly, "honestly and truly, he has the most remarkable mind that I, in my little way, have ever known.

"He is so infinitely much more clever than I, why he is a whole incarnation ahead of me, so that I can barely keep up to understand him.

"But," and this was with winsome pride, "he has done a great deal for me. I really am improving, and oh it really is so wonderful to live with him, and hear what he says at odd minutes. I often wish I could learn stenography, so as to run away quick sometimes, and write down what he has said without his knowing it.

"When I want to tease him, I tell him that he is only a near-silk genius, because of course, he really isn't a genius all the time. And there's one thing sure, he married me just in time to save himself from becoming the most conceited fop you can imagine.

Despairs of Ever Being Great.

"But I have a sense of humor anyway, and whenever he gets too uppish, I just tug at the corner of the rug, and over backward he goes. After which he comes up much improved."

And Miss Walker threw back her head and laughed heartily at the picture she had drawn of her own dear husband being tipped off his own hearth rug by the gentlest and most adoring of wives.

Still we keep coming back to genius.

"No it is not hard work," Miss Walker shook her head, and her eyes turned very wistful, "for if hard work would do it, I should be a genius. I should be willing to do anything, anything in the world to be a great actress, especially in one of my husband's plays.

"But I truly believe that I am too conscientious ever to be really great. I take the greatest pains, I grow very nervous, I get fearful stage fright when we go to a strange town, I feel the responsibility most heavily upon me, and so—" with a tragic little shrug—"I lack abandon."

But even as Miss Walker spoke, there was a dramatic intensity in her manner, a trained reserve, a quality in her tone which belied her words. And yet one cannot be sorry that Miss Walker should underestimate herself, for she is such a contrast to many flamboyantly self-appreciative ladies of "the profession."

Charlotte Walker, heroine of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and wife of Eugene Walters, its author, who declares hard work never made a genius.

Get This for Colds

Prescription for Positive Results. Don't Experiment.

"From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine Compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake well. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Smaller doses to children according to age." This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to the medical profession. Be sure to get only the genuine (Globe) Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top sealed case. If your druggist is out of stock he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Don't fool with uncertain mixtures. It is risky. Local druggists say that for the past six years this has had a wonderful demand.

UNION BRICKLAYERS WIN A CONCESSION

Following a brief strike of union bricklayers against the employment of non-union carpenters on five apartment houses being erected on Florida street, Dorchester, work was resumed on the buildings to-day under a settlement favorable to the union. Another strike on a Petersboro street apartment house, called yesterday by the carpenters against the employment of "pointers" not members of Bricklayers' Union No. 3, remains unsettled. Provisional strike orders also were issued to-day to the men at work on twenty-nine apartment houses on Walnut street, Dorchester, should the builders endeavor to put in the class of "pointers" objected to by the regular Bricklayers' Union.

CAVALIERI GETS DIVORCE

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The romance of Robert Winthrop Chanler, the rich New Yorker, and Lina Cavalieri, the diva, whose domestic affairs have been aired in the press of two continents, ended in the divorce court to-day, when a decree of divorce was granted to the diva in the Tribunal of the Seine. The suit had been brought by Chanler after a financial agreement had been made by which the beautiful singer shears off a large portion of the Chanler fortune.

The break in the relations of "Sheriff Bob," as Chanler was known because of the office he formerly held in Duchess County, N. Y., came a little over a year ago, shortly after it became known that Chanler, in the heat of his passion for the singer, had signed away nearly his entire fortune to his wife.

Nobleman the Favorite.

A Russian nobleman had also entered the marital melodrama and his attentions to Mme. Cavalieri were distasteful to Chanler. On the other hand the attentions of the Rusian were apparently welcomed by Mme. Chanler. When Cavalieri was ill the Russian nobleman visited her every day bringing flowers and sweetmeats. Chanler complained that while the Russian could see his wife, he, her husband was barred from her chamber.

Chanler fell in love with Cavalieri, while she was singing in New York and proposed to her. The diva went abroad without giving a reply. Later she cabled the word "Yes" from Paris. Chanler hurried over to Paris where the marriage was performed. It was not long after that before whispers were heard that Chanler was unhappy. One of his plaints was that his wife would not allow him spending money.

"Who's Looney Now?"

When Chanler came back to the United States in the fall of 1910 litigation was instituted over the famous marriage contract. It was settled out of court. John Armstrong Chanler, who goes by the name of Chaloner in Virginia, where he lives, gave out the famous question of "Who's looney now" in connection with this case. Chaloner long before had ben declared insane in New York State by his relatives and fled to Virginia, where he was legally protected.

Text of the Decree.

The judgment giving the divorce to Mme. Cavalieri reads as follows:

"Whereas, the two parties concerned were married on June 18, 1910, without any previous marriage settlements; whereas there was no child born; whereas Mr. Chanler refused on several occasions to receive his wife at his conjugal domicile and resume their common life; whereas in replying to the summons to receive his wife, which summons was served on December 16, 1911, by the sheriff's officers, Mr. Chanler declared in the most absolute manner that was possible that he refused to resume the common life, saying: 'I have had enough already. If, despite me, my wife entered the door, I would jump through the window'; whereas he agreed to sign the officers' report on condition that he did not hear any more of his wife, this court grants a divorce through the husband's wrongdoings."

The court nominates a notary to liquidate the respective rights of Mme. Cavalieri and Mr. Chanler as a divorce entails the separation of the property. The court condemns Chanler to pay all costs.

WHAT IS YOUR OPINION ABOUT THE SCHOOLS? Some say the schools are wrong. There is a world-wide movement to modernize and reform the stupid, unscientific and haphazard methods of education which now prevail. The subject is discussed over two pages of the Sunday AMERICAN by William McAndrew, principal of Washington Irving High School, New York; Dr. Woods Hutchinson, Lewis Nixon, Dr. Maria Montessori, Dr. Eliot, Dr. Henry Smith Pritchett and Professor Boris Sidis. We earnestly recommend these two pages to the thoughtful consideration of every parent and every instructor in New England.

ANDERSON IS INSTALLED

Captain William L. Anderson of Jamaica Plain begins to-day his official duties as commander of General Charles Russell Lowell Camp, No. 9, Sons of Veterans. He was installed in office at a largely attended meeting of the Camp at its headquarters, No. 1151 Washington street. Three hundred representatives of the G. A. R., S. of V., W. R. C. and D. of V. were present. A banquet and dance followed the installation ceremonies.

BOSTON MOURNS DICKENS' DEATH

The sudden death of Alfred Tennyson Dickens, son of the novelist, in New York has revealed the fact that a number of wealthy men had recently organized to create a fund in this country for relieving the condition of destitute heirs of Charles Dickens in England and elsewhere. The details of the plan have not been fully worked out as yet, Henry Clews announces, but it is expected soon to make definite announcement of them. The plan was not known to Alfred Tennyson Dickens.

No arrangements will be made for the funeral until word has been received from Mr. Dickens's children in Australia. His wife died a number of years ago.

Boston people learned with regret today of the lecturer's death, for he was a guest here recently for several weeks, making the city the starting point of a tour preparatory to the celebration of his father's centenary.

Acute indigestion was the cause of death, and Mr. Dickens died without realizing the seriousness of his attack. He had been taken ill in the lobby of the Hotel Astor as he was making his final preparations to leave for Kingston, N. Y., where he was to give his lecture entitled "My Father's Life and Works." He was conscious to the end and one of the last things he did was to dictate a letter to his daughter in Australia, in which he referred to his illness which, he said, had made necessary the cancelling of the Kingston lecture.

"I trust that I will not have to cancel another engagement," he said in the letter.

He also dictated a telegram which was sent to the manager of the house in Kingston, at which he was to have lectured, saying he hoped to fulfill the engagement later.

Godson Of Tennyson.

Mr. Dickens was the eldest surviving son of the novelist, and was a godson of the late Alfred, Lord Tennyson, poet laureate of England. He was in his sixty-seventh year.

Mr. Dickens, who spent the greater part of his life in Australia, going there at the age of twenty, arrived in this country on September 20, landing in Boston. He rested there for ten days because of a slight indisposition before beginning his lecture tour, which he opened in Lowell October 9. His travels to fill lecture engagements took him to many cities in the East, and in the West as far as Denver. His last lecture was Friday, December 29, before the State Teachers' Association at Indianapolis.

A passenger upon the Cymric last September, Mr. Dickens was welcomed in Boston with the same cordiality his father received before him. At an informal reception tendered him by the Boston City club, Mr. Dickens said of Boston: "My experience is that Boston, so far as I have gone (apart from Melbourne, Australia, my home city), is undoubtedly the most charming city I ever visited, and the gentlemen I have met are in keeping with the city."

Mr. Dickens created a sensation while here by stating to an interviewer that as far as his observation went, the women of Boston had beefy ankles.

While staying at a Boston hotel, Mr. Dickens mislaid his cherished silk hat and constant search by himself and a long chain of porters and bell-hops failed to result in the discovery of its hiding place. The mystery threatened to engulf the entire detective force of the city, when it was most unexpectedly solved.

Born in London.

Always well groomed and alert, as befitted the English gentleman of an old-fashioned type, and carrying himself bravely through the exacting functions that were held in his honor in Boston, it was noticeable to close observers that Mr. Dickens's health was far from satisfactory.

Mr. Dickens was born October 28, 1845, at Devonshire Terrace, London, just opposite Marylebone Church. After school days at Boulogne, he proceeded to Brackenbury's Military Academy at Wimbledon, to be prepared for service in the Indian branch. Here one of his school fellows was James Payn, who has preserved the mental atmosphere of his old school in fiction. The breaking out of the Indian Mutiny and the subsequent dissolution of the East India Company put an untimely end to young Dickens's military career. At the age of twenty he followed Mr. Pegotty and Mr. Micawber and poor broken-hearted little Em'ly to the great continent "down under," from which he never returned until last year.

His memory of his childhood and youth and all the great misty figures that peopled it was vivid and suggestive. Of Australia he spoke little, and one guessed his life had at times been hard and in its material result never very successful. But of his great father he would own to none but kindly memories. "Never," he declared, in the one reference he permitted himself to a family disunion that is matter of common knowledge, "was there a fonder and more indulgent father to every one of his children."

SIDNEY DREW BANKRUPT

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Sidney Drew, the actor, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, listing his liabilities at $32,960 and his assets at $5,200. Chief among the liabilities is a judgment of $10,000 for breach of contract, held by A. J. Small of Toronto, Can.

New accounts are attracted to a bank through the satisfaction of depositors who recommend it to friends or business associates seeking new banking connections.

That the First National Bank of Boston holds a strong place in the confidence of its customers is convincingly shown by the following figures, indicating the growth of its deposits since 1905 without consolidation:

SELECTMEN ORDER STOCKBRIDGE FOLK TO BEWARE OF LENOX

LENOX, Jan. 3.—The Selectmen of Stockbridge have ordered that visitors and residents of that town cannot attend receptions, dances or meetings of any kind in Lenox, because there are several cases of diphtheria in Lenoxdale, three miles away. The notice, signed by the Selectmen, which the public regards practically as an order, reads as follows:

"On account of prevalence of diphtheria in Lee, Lenoxdale and Lenox the public is requested to refrain from visiting or having communication with the people of these places."

REVEAL TRICKS OF BEEF TRUST

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Tricks of the beef trust were given an open-air demonstration before the jury in the trial of the ten millionaire packers in the United States District Court to-day. Henry Veeder, former secretary of the old pool, when he resumed his testimony at the morning session of the court was asked to identify a letter containing a summary of weekly shipments which had been given to the members of the "Association" in 1898.

He recognized it as having been one of the hundreds of weekly summarizations of shipments he had prepared.

Then came one of the most exciting incidents of the trial. Attorney Pierce Butler of St. Paul, who was questioning the witness for the government, decided to put the subject to a critical test. The summary, it was admitted by the defense, was one of those used to regulate the percentage of shipments in "Territory A" under the pool agreement that controlled prices and stipulated the volume of business to be done by each firm by which it is claimed that competition between the packing houses was completely wiped out.

"Can you tell by this statement just what amount of business was allotted to the members of the association the week following?" asked Mr. Butler.

"Yes. I think I can tell," replied the witness. "Let me have a pencil."

Then Mr. Veeder checked off the total volume of shipments and the margins of sales, after which he figured rapidly for a few minutes. The jury watched the witness intently as he quickly solved the percentage puzzles and made the computations.

"Here are the figures," he said.

"Do they tell the volume of shipments allotted each firm for the week following the drafting of the agreement?"

"Yes, that is in 'Territor A.'"

The figures follow:

Armour & Co., 21.50 per cent.; Armour Packing Co., 5.50 per cent.; Cudahy Packing Co., 5 per cent.; G. H. Hammond Packing Co., 12.50 per cent.; Morris & Co., 14 per cent.; Schwarzschild & Sulzberger 8.50 per cent.; Swift & Co., 33 per cent. Total 100 per cent.

LULU GLASER GETS DECREE

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Ralph C. Herz, comedian and musical comedy star, beat his wife, who is known on the stage as Lulu Glaser, choked her and called her a barmaid, according to Mrs. Herz and witnesses who appeared before Judge McDonald in the Superior Court here. Mrs. Herz is seeking a divorce on the ground of cruelty.

"We were married at New York, May 23, 1907," the actress testified. "The first trouble we had was November 12 of that year. He threatened to kill me, took me by the throat and choked me black and blue.

"The same things occurred on November 19, 1910, the day we separated. He again choked me, called me a barmaid and —I can't say the word. Our life has been nothing but repeated nagging and cruelty on his part."

"How often did he use violence toward you?" Judge McDonald asked.

"Scarcely a week passed that he did not strike me," Mrs. Herz replied.

William Glaser, who accompanied his sister to court, did not take the stand, but his testimony was read from a deposition taken in New York. "He called her vile names on several occasions in my presence," Glaser's deposition read. "While I was living with them he assaulted her, and struck her with his fists."

Herz did not contest and the attorneys were instructed by the court to prepare the decree.

FAVOR ZENO PARK AS JAMAICA PLAYGROUND

The Jamaica Plain Citizens' Association, at a heated meeting in Eliot Hall, favored as a site for a playground, for which $25,000 has been appropriated by the city, a vacant lot in the rear of Curtis street, Forest Hills, known as Zeno Park. The majority report of the committee had preferred the property of the Neighborhood House on Carolina avenue. Edgar O. Achorn accused P. J. Brady, chairman of the Ward 23 Democratic Committee, of having "packed" the meeting with residents of Forest Hills. There were several other tilts. The final action on the matter rests with the Playgrounds Commission.

GOT THE GRIP?

Here Is a Simple Home Remedy That Will Cure You in a Hurry

"Got the grippe?" It's fashionable, but very miserable, nevertheless. The doctors say it is epidemic. Here is a prescription that is working more cures than all the drugs under the sun. You can mix it at home for yourself. A teaspoonful every four hours will break up the worst case inside of a few hours.

Shake together in a large bottle two ounces of glycerine, eight ounces of pure whiskey and one-half ounce virgin oil of pine. You can get the ingredients from any druggist. Be careful to secure only the genuine virgin oil of pine, which you can identify by the sealed wooden carton bearing the name of the Leach Chemical Company, of Cincinnati, on the label. Put up in this form the essential properties of the virgin oil of pine are absolutely preserved and the effectiveness of the medicine is assured.

There will be quite a little of the medicine left over after your grippe has been cured. This will serve as the most effective cough and cold remedy for the whole family for months to come.

MAETERLINCK IS IN FRANCE

The management of the Boston Opera Company satisfied itself to-day that Maurice Maeterlinck, the poet-playwright, is not in America. There has been endless speculation whether the gifted Belgian would come to this country, following his wife, Georgette LeBlanc, who is now in Boston.

The New York Times publishes a cable from Maeterlinck at Nice, on the Riviera, France, in which he says:

"I shall not go to America this Winter."

Mme. Maeterlinck has taken keen enjoyment in declining to elucidate the question of her husband's plans. She has talked in entertaining manner about him and has indicated by her very manner how deep and tender is the love between them. But she wouldn't tell the reporters just where Maeterlinck is or whether he intended to come here.

GIRL HIDES SECRET OF SHOOTING IN Y. W. C. A.

Miss Olney, she threw her hands around his neck and begged him to tell her the truth about her condition.

"Am I going to die, doctor?" she asked; "please tell me the truth about it. I do so want to die!"

Then she allowed herself to be placed upon the stretcher to be carried downstairs and out into the ambulance.

Shot Rouses People.

Excited groups of young women stood in the hallways on every floor of the building and discussed the attempted suicide.

Miss Huntoon, superintendent of the Y. W. C. A., knew of no reason for Miss Olney's act.

"Miss Olney rooms alone," she said, "as all our rooms are single ones. Hers is on the fifth floor. When she came here last October she said she was nineteen years old. She was apparently a quiet girl and did not entertain any men friends in the building, that I remember.

"Many of the girls here do not know her except by sight, for she was not over-chummy with any of them. When the shot was heard nearly everyone rushed to the room. She left no word for anyone that I am aware of.

"Miss Olney has not been working recently, I have been told. She formerly worked in a department store as a clerk, I believe.

"Only one chamber in the revolver had been loaded, and that was the one she fired. The police told me it was .38-calibre. Apparently, as far as I could judge, the revolver was not a new one. I do not know where she got it."

In answer to a question as to whether the girl had intimated that she was going to harm herself, Miss Huntoon said:

"No, not that I know of. If we had known about it, we would have looked out for her."

One of the girls whose room is also on the fifth floor of the building said:

"I had but a speaking acquaintance with Miss Olney. I knew that she was not working and for the past few days had appeared to be greatly depressed. I spoke with her early last evening but she told me nothing of her troubles and gave no indication that she meditated taking her own life."

Cause of Shooting a Mystery.

"I know nothing of any man having had anything to do with her or being the cause of her trouble. She is naturally of a retiring disposition and is not one of those who like to confide in others. Why she left her place in the store I do not know, except that possibly she had only been engaged for the holidays. It is a fact that she began working there about a month ago when extra help was needed just before the Christmas rush."

Mrs. Van Trump while being rushed to the hospital in an automobile said she could think of no reason why Ruth had attempted to end her life other than that she had had a "falling out" with a man of whom she thought a great deal.

"I know," said Mrs. Van Trump, "that Ruth thought a great deal of a man who lives somewhere in the centre of Providence. Who he is I do not know. He is considerably older than Ruth—about 30 years, I should say.

"He called on her one evening last Summer at our home, and I think Ruth has seen him a great deal since. No objection was raised to the man by either her father or her mother, so far as I know, and I am certain that she did not leave home in order to keep company with the man.

"Ruth had a great many friends downtown and she was with them a great deal of the time.

"Ruth left home about four weeks ago to work in a department store. She went away against the wishes of her father and mother and against the admonitions of us all.

"She worked during the Christmas holidays, and it was last Saturday, I believe, that she got through. I have not seen her for about two weeks. A few days ago, though, she was at the home of our sister Hattie, or Mrs. John Card, who lives in Providence. Hattie advised Ruth to go home, but she said she wouldn't. Ruth didn't have much money with her.

Had a Pleasant Home.

"When I saw Ruth two weeks ago she appeared to act as usual. She certainly did not give me any hint that she intended to try to do away with herself, and I am sure she did not make any mention of an intention of the sort to Hattie.

"Ruth had every reason to stay at home. She was the youngest of seven living children, three sisters and three brothers, and I guess we may have petted her too much. She had every reason to remain at home and father and mother have left nothing undone to make something of her.

"They sent her to the Rhode Island Commercial School. That was, I think, about two years ago. She did not finish the course. We wanted her to learn stenography. She didn't care for it. Then, a short time ago, we got a piano for her and father urged her to study and become a teacher. She can play the piano splendidly. She had everything she wanted. All she had to do was ask and her request was granted.

"But she refused to stay at home. She went to the city and we did not know where she was until a few days ago. We had tried to locate her, but it was only recently that we learned that she was living in the Y. W. C. A. building.

"It's sad for us all, but I think father will be affected the most. He is very nervous, and I was afraid to have anybody tell him about the affair, for fear the shock would be too much for him. He seemed to take it well, but I guess it stunned him so that he couldn't really grasp the seriousness of the news Charlie told him.

"There's more to this, but I am not going to tell you."

Daughter of Deacon.

Miss Olney is the daughter of George Olney of No. 24 Waterman road, Johnstown. Her father is a deacon in the Baptist Church there, and a former deacon of the Graniteville Baptist Church. He is sick in bed, and it was feared that the shock of the news of his daughter's act would affect his condition.

Miss Olney left home last October, and it is said that grave anxiety was felt by her parents and sisters at the time. She had been living at the Y. M. C. A. for the past three months, and had been employed in a department store until a few weeks ago.

There were no pictures or letters from men in the girl's room. Two pictures of girls were found behind the bureau, turned face to the wall.

Miss Olney had evidently made careful preparation for her death, and it is thought that she may have destroyed letters which would have served to throw light on the reason for her attempt at self-destruction.

At the hospital, it was said to-day, that while her condition is serious, she will not necessarily die. The bullet pierced her right lung and is lodged in the back. The doctors at the hospital plan to probe for the bullet to-day.

¶ WHAT HAPPENED IN BEAUTIFUL LANTELME'S TOMB? She was the most beautiful woman in Paris. Her death a few weeks ago was the most extraordinary tragedy that has excited the city in years. The violation of her grave, which has followed it, is even more extraordinary and shocking. The story, illustrated, will be found only in the Sunday AMERICAN.

HELPED LOWER PRICE OF GAS

John A. Coulthurst, candidate for City Council, who is indorsed by Louis D. Brandeis, especially in reference to Mr. Coulthurst's activity in the fight for cheaper gas, explained to-day the part he played in that famous issue, saying:

"In 1903 the Legislature passed an act authorizing the consolidation of eight or nine local gas companies under the present Boston Consolidated Gas Company, with a new capitalization which, when it was figured out, would have meant an increase over the combined capitalizations of the constituent companies of at least 100 per cent.

"The act provided that the Gas and Electric Light Commission should appraise the value of the plants and properties of the constituent companies, which value was to be the new capitalization.

"For this the commission employed two experts to make the inventory and appraisal. Their report was published in the early Summer of 1904. The commission advertised public hearings.

"I had been making a feeble protest in the Legislature of 1904 against the injustice of the new capitalization. My protest did not reach the public ear, but it did attract the attention of the Public Franchise League, in which Louis D. Brandeis was a leading spirit. It also attracted the attention of the Boston AMERICAN. The AMERICAN, after investigating the situation, entered vigorously into the agitation of the question. It employed counsel and retained the services of Professor Bemis of Cleveland.

"There were lengthy hearings before the Gas and Electric Light Commission on the questions both of capitalization and of reduction in the price of gas. A determined fight was made in the incoming Legislature to reduce the capitalization.

"The United Improvement Association was organized to enter this fight. I was its first president and acted as counsel and thus came into direct contact with Mr. Brandeis.

"As the public knows, the gas fight was a complete success. The capitalization was cut to a reasonable figure and the price of gas was soon reduced."

NEWP[illegible]T TO INSTALL ELECTRIC CHAIR FOR HOMELESS ANIMALS

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 3.—The Newport Animal Rescue League has decided to purchase and install an electric chair, on the same principle as that used to execute criminals in New York and Massachusetts, to put homeless cats and dogs out of their misery. Until it arrives no more cats and dogs will be killed at the Newport Animal Refuge. The ladies on the executive board are particularly aroused by reports that the cats and dogs which are put out of the way sometimes suffer for ten of fifteen minutes before death comes. They have until now been killed by giving them poison.

THINK DOROTHY ARNOLD FOUND

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The mystery of the disappearance of Dorothy Arnold, that for thirteen months has puzzled public and private investigators, seems at last near to solution.

The society girl, for whom search has been made in every corner of the globe, is said to be alive and well and within a few score miles of New York city.

MRS. FITZGERALD ON RECORD TOUR

Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald has qualified as a knight of the Exalter Order of Whirlwind campaigners. Her final test was successfully passed when she toured six wards of the city, made speeches, fraternized and even danced with the voters. She speaks at a number of parlor meetings in the Back Bay to-day.

Mrs. FitzGerald is making a strenuous campaign for the School Board. In her whirlwind tour she made six open air speeches to good crowds, to the accompaniment of red fire and a woman trumpeter.

Mrs. FitzGerald spoke in the wards of the "four Jims"—Jim Doyle of Ward 12, Jim Curley of Ward 17, Jim Timilty of Ward 18 and Jim McInerney of Ward 19. In addition, she addressed a meeting at the Francis Parkman School in Forest Hills, where she was questioned freely by her hearers. She also addressed a meeting of the Irish County Club in Appleton Hall, and made an open air spech in Ward 10.

Mrs. FitzGerald won her spurs in her appearance at the Paine Memorial Hall. There, when she arrived, the annual ball of Division 75 of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was in full swing.

Mrs. FitzGerald asked permission to speak. She got the permission, and made an address to the crowd that stopped their dancing to listen. When she finished one of the floor directors asked her to dance with him and she was about to accept when her friends insisted that she hurry to keep other engagements. In leaving, she promised to come back if she was through early enough.

And, sure enough, later in the evening she returned and danced a round in one of the last dances of the Hibernian society's ball.

OPERATE UPON MME. CURIE

PARIS, Jan. 3.—An operation for appendicitis will be performed to-day upon Mme. Curie, the scientist, who received the Nobel prize for chemistry last month. Mme. Curie has been at the hospital suffering with acute appendicitis since Monday. The doctor attending her considers an operation unavoidable. The illness was first noticed last month upon Mme. Curie's return from Stockholm, but the scientist continued working until a few days ago, when her friends became alarmed at the symptoms of her illness and advised her to call in a physician, who diagnosed her case.

Mme. Curie's name figured in the divorce case recently brought by the wife of Professor Langevin. A number of letters from the woman scientist figured prominently in the case. After a hearing a decree was granted Mrs. Langevin, with the custody of the children. The suit was the sensation of Paris.

KENT RAVES AS HE WAITS DEATH

WINDSOR, Vt., Jan. 3.—Elroy Kent, convicted murderer of Delia B. Congdon, will expiate his crime on the scaffold here Friday afternoon at 1 o'clock. The scaffold is ready to be set up, and invitations have been issued to the twelve legal witnesses.

Kent was convicted of the murder of Delia B. Congdon at East Wallingford, Vt., July 24, 1908.

No representative of any newspaper or press association is to be allowed to witness the hanging, and the limited number of men who are to see it have been cautioned against giving any details to representatives of the press.

Kent's will be the first execution in this State since Mary Rogers of Bennington on December 8, 1905, was hung for the murder of her husband.

All hope of a reprieve or commutation of his sentence to life imprisonment has left the prisoner's heart. With the end of his span of life but a few days distant, Kent is in a state of collapse, mental and physical. At intervals he rouses himself from his lethargy to howl at the top of his voice.

The doomed man is under a constant watch, and every symptom of a violent outbreak is the signal for two guards to enter his cell and quiet him.

At the age of thirty-six, as he awaits the hangman, Kent has behind him a record of criminal acts and moral delinquencies which began when he was seven years of age. A great portion of his life has been spent in prison or a lunatic asylum.

It is predicted in many quarters that the Legislature will abolish the death penalty after his execution, and that Kent will be the last person to be hanged in the State.

Kent escaped from the State Insane Asylum at Waterbury on July 11, 1908, and on July 24, Miss Delia B. Congdon, a deaf mute woman, who was alone in her house in East Wallingford, was criminally assaulted and then murdered by being choked to death.

In the asylum Kent had a mania for cutting his initials, "E. K.," on everything he could get hold of, shovel handles, boards in the buildings and on doors. When the authorities started to investigate the killing of Miss Congdon they found the same initials carved in places at her house, and [illegible] pointed to Kent as the perpetrator of the crime.

$135,000 FIRE IN MILFORD

MILFORD, Jan. 3.—The Music Hall block, a three-story brick structure at Pine and Main streets, was destroyed by fire here early to-day. The loss is estimated at $135,000.

The building was situated in the heart of the business district and several large buildings and stores in the vicinity were threatened. Scores of residences along Pine street in the rear of the Music Hall were in danger and scores of persons fled from their homes carrying their belongings with them.

Sparks from the fire fell in showers upon the roof of the Lincoln House on the opposite corner of Pine and Main streets and more than a hundred or more guests, awakened by the cries of "Fire!" ran into the street.

The first floor of the Music Hall block was occupied by stores, and the second and third floors by clubrooms in the front. The rear of the building is taken up by Gordon Brothers' moving picture house.

The blaze started probably from an overheated stove in the restaurant of J. S. Macoux. It was discovered by Night Watchman Oliver D. Holmes. The firemen, when they supposed the fire had been extinguished, returned to their quarters. Half an hour later Holmes, while making his rounds, discovered the stage of the theatre, which is directly over the restaurant, a mass of flames. Another alarm was sounded, but the flames gained such great headway that all the apparatus in Milford was called out, and help was summoned from Hopedale.

From the stage of the theatre the fire quickly spread back into Macoux's restaurant, and from there to the local office of the Adams Express Company on Pine street and Morgan's Pharmacy, King Brothers' clothing store and Lilley & Mader's confectionery store on Main street.

Lester Morgan, who was asleep in a room at the rear of the pharmacy, was awakened by Holmes and fled to the street. Holmes also groped his way to the top of the building and aroused Frank Morgan, who was asleep in a room on the third floor. Frank Morgan had a narrow escape, and if it had not been for Holmes he might have suffocated.

The asbestos curtain confined the fire to the stage for more than an hour, but the flames got beyond the control of the firemen and sweeping through the auditorium reached the rooms of the Robert Emmet Society and the Gossip Exchange Club on the second floor and the rooms of the Only and Awnis clubs on the third floors. The latter organizations are among the most prominent in the town.

INDIAN SCARES 'PHONE GIRLS

WEBSTER, Jan. 3.—Deerfoot, the Indian, came into Webster District Court to-day to answer to a charge of indulging unduly in the White Man's "firewater," also to terrorizing the girls in the Webster Telephone Exchange.

This Deerfoot is not the original picturesque Indian hero of J. Fenimore Cooper's novels. He is a modern Indian, and the telephone girls and the police say that he was a "Bad Indian" last night. His full name is Bombay Deerfoot, and he is a vaudeville actor. The police allege, in this connection, that Deerfoot was last night what is known in popular slang as a "bad actor."

Miss Margaret Love and Miss Mabel Raymond were seated at the 'phone switchboards when Deerfoot came in. He wished to telephone to Boston, but the girls couldn't make out his talk. They were frightened so that they climbed out on the fire-escape. Frank Bora, night operator, shoved Deerfoot into the hall and the girls came back and locked the door on the inside. Then, according to Patrolman John Symkowski, Deerfoot smashed the door of the supply room and of the office of Frederick H. Berger, clerk of courts.

Deerfoot says he is a Carlisle graduate and a dentist by profession. Just now he is woking the vaudeville circuit in a rope-throwing act. He was booked this week at a local vaudeville house.

MOTION FOR SPENCER RETRIAL OVERRULED

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 3.—Motion for a new trial for Bertram G. Spencer, convicted of the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, was overruled by Judge Crosby in the Superior Court to-day. Counsel for Spencer have until January 20 to file with the Supreme Court exceptions taken after the jury convicted their client. A new trial was asked on the grounds that the jury failed to consider seriously the insanity plea and because the motions for a change of venue to Worcester and the barring of Springfield men as jurors were overruled.

HERE'S A HORSE ON SUPT. PIERCE

A stableman from Pitts street picked the wrong horse in Pemberton Square to-day and gave Superintendent of Police William H. Pierce a shirtsleeve run for what the "Super" thought was a thief.

The "Super" drives in every morning from his home on Dale street, Roxbury, in a neat buggy, drawn by a sleek bay horse. He leaves the hitch, blanketed and weighted, in front of police headquarters on Pemberton Square, and a man comes up from a Pitts street stable for it, returning the hitch at night for the "Super" to drive home.

Now Daniel W. Coakley, attorney in the Pemberton building on the other side of Pemberton Square hill, drives in every day from Brighton in an equally neat buggy, drawn by an equally neat bay horse.

"Dan" leaves his hitch in front of the Pemberton building for a man to call from a Pitts street stable. This program is carried out without trouble usually.

But to-day the man who comes up from Pitts street for "Dan's" rig was sick and a substitute was sent. He saw the "Super's" hitch and started to drive it away.

The "Super" glanced out and thought his hitch was being stolen, right under his official nose. Without stopping to put on his coat he hustled out in his shirtsleeves and sprinted so fast he overtook his rig turning down the hill. Inspectors Douglas and Harris came by and the "Super" ordered the stableman arrested.

Back at headquarters the man managed to stammer out enough English to explain matters. The telephone corroborated him and he was released.

TANK BOAT SAVES BARGE AND CREW

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Eight men on the barge Navahoe, who were whipped about in a gale at the mercy of wind and sea for thirty-six hours before they were finally rescued after desperate efforts by the oil tank steamer Iroquois, arrived here to-day on the tank steamer, which also had the barge in tow. The Navahoe was caught in a blizzard 200 miles east of Cape Sable and was being battered to pieces when sighted by the Iroquois.

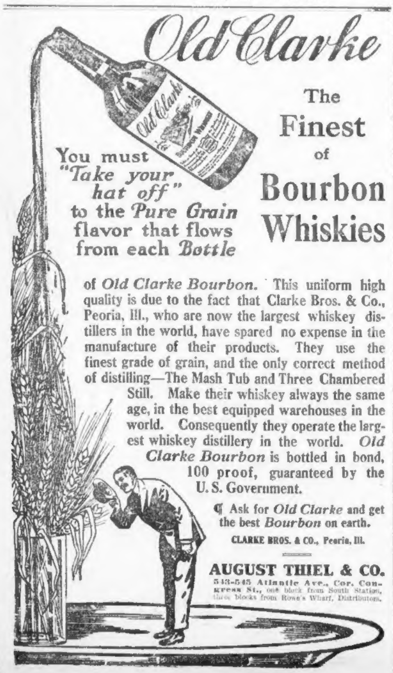
How to Cure Rheumatism
Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Easily Mixed at Home.

This simple and harmless formula has worked wonders for all who have tried it, quickly curing chronic and acute rheumatism and backache. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them in a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." Good results come after the first few doses. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it for you in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take a patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original, one ounce, sealed, yellow package. This was published here last Winter and hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it in a short time.



Old Clarke

The Finest of Bourbon Whiskies

You must "Take your hat off" to the Pure Grain flavor that flows from each Bottle of Old Clarke Bourbon. This uniform high quality is due to the fact that Clarke Bros. & Co., Peoria, Ill., who are now the largest whiskey distillers in the world, have spared no expense in the manufacture of their products. They use the finest grade of grain, and the only correct method of distilling—The Mash Tub and Three Chambered Still. Make their whiskey always the same age, in the best equipped warehouses in the world. Consequently they operate the largest whiskey distillery in the world. Old Clarke Bourbon is bottled in bond, 100 proof, guaranteed by the U. S. Government.

The track candidates will have a chance to compete in four meets this season for indoor work [illegible] Second Division of the Connecticut Coast Artillery Corps at Hartford [illegible] and in this meet Harvard will [illegible] a team of 780 yards with the University of Pennsylvania.

This race will [illegible] dual relations with the Quakers [illegible] track and means a very [illegible] on the part of the athletic [illegible] of Cambridge.

Penn Back on the List.

The Philadelphians [illegible] the Harvard [illegible] in football a number of years ago [illegible] last Spring when the [illegible] the break and played Penn [illegible].

Athletic [illegible] the two colleges are rapidly [illegible] of old and the relay race [illegible] go a long way toward healing the [illegible] caused by the unpleasantness [illegible] 1907.

The season for the other [illegible] dates will close with the [illegible] in the [illegible] after the B. A. A. meet on February 10. They will all then lay off until the track in the Stadium is fit for use, at which time the Spring outdoor season will assume proportions.

The first meet that Harvard will be represented in at all is that of the Armory A. A. in Providence to be held some time at the end of this month. The only representation of Harvard, however, will be in the form of relay teams. [illegible] probably being the [illegible] two relay races, one [illegible] yards and the other a 780-yard affair. Individuals will be [illegible] to enter for the practice, but they will not compete officially.

Track Outlook Promising.

Next comes the B. A. A. meet, then the Winter carnival and the Hartford meet.

In the B. A. A. Harvard will enter men in every event [illegible] the school [illegible] tion to having the regular class relays [illegible] the freshmen race with the Yale [illegible] varsity race of 780 yards with [illegible] the 390-yard relay run with [illegible] thus continuing the precedent created [illegible] year.

McDonough forced the going the entire distance. Wilson was badly used up near the finish, but managed to hang on until the end. McDonough's fine, all-round work delighted the fans. Young Rosch of this city bested Young Foster of Adams in the semi-final up of the evening. These two [illegible] freely all the way, with Rosch the aggressor. Young Sequoin of this city and Young McCoy boxed four rounds, curtain raiser.

CORNELL SEVEN LOSES TO YALE BY 1-0 SCORE

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Yale defeated Cornell at hockey here by a 1 to 0 score in a game which was fast from start to finish. The battle was hot and neither team was able to score until in the last few minutes of the play the Blue team shot the puck into the [illegible] net for a point. Captain Vail of Cornell is still out with a sprained ankle and probably cannot play in the final of the series tonight.

YANKEES AGAIN LOSE AT TENNIS

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand, Jan. 3.—The Australian defenders of the Davis lawn tennis challenge cup made a clean sweep of the matches with the American challengers, winning the two final single matches to-day.

Captain Norman E. Brookes of the Australian team defeated Maurice McLoughlin and Beals C. Wright of Boston defaulted in his match with Ted Heath.

Brookes beat McLoughlin by the score of [illegible]-4, [illegible]-6, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4. Wright was ill and could not play.

The Americans seemed to have a case of stage fright, and the defenders had little difficulty in winning all of the matches. The Yankees fought hard in several of the sets, but in none of the contests did they play brilliant tennis.

Brookes and Heath displayed wonderful form in all of the matches, and tennis experts believe that the two Australian stars are the best tennis players the world has ever seen.

NAME NEW YORKERS FOR BOUTS AT B. A. A

In addition to the intercity bouts between New York and Boston amateur boxers the B. A. A. will also hold, on the evening of January 20, the semi-finals and finals of the open classes in the tournament for 120, 135, 145 and 158-pound and heavyweight boxers. The trials in the tournament will be boxed January 17. John McHugh of the I. A. A. C. of New York, who is selecting the New York boxers, has sent to George Brown of the B. A. A. the names of the following boxers he will bring to Boston—105 pounds, Joe Hopkins, Metropolitan champion; 115 pounds, Charles Quinland; 125 pounds, H. Atkins, Metropolitan champion; 135 pounds, Dan Coughlin or W. Brown; 145 pounds, John Fitzhenry; 158 pounds, W. Beckman, Metropolitan and ex-National champion.

¶ THEY HAVE FOUND THE WANDERING JEW! The Shoemaker who insulted Our Saviour, and who was doomed to wander about the earth until the second coming, is now reported from an oasis in warstricken Tripoli. Cartaphilus was thirty years old when he struck Jesus. He has lived ever since, but when he reaches the age of one hundred he returns to thirty again. Read about him in the Sunday AMERICAN.

NEW PARK FOR DODGERS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Brooklyn National League Baseball Club will move to new grounds with modern grandstand accommodations in the Flatbush residential section of the borough next June, according to announcement which President Charles H. Ebbetts gave out to-day.

YOUNG LANGFORD DRAWS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—In a good bout at the Mt. Vernon Sporting Club, Mt. Vernon, Simmons O'Brien of Yonkers and Young Sam Langford of Mt. Vernon fought a ten-round draw. In a previous fight two weeks ago O'Brien knocked out Langford in the tenth round.

GEORGETOWN TO PLAY HOLY CROSS

WORCESTER, Jan. 3.—Negotiations are now under way for Holy Cross and Georgetown University to meet on the gridiron here next Fall. The student body and the alumni want the game, and the chances are more than ever that the Washington team will be brought here for the game. The management of the Georgetown eleven opened negotiations with the Worcesters last year for a game last Fall, but they could not see their way clear of such a heavy expense.

Football at Holy Cross was a large success last Fall, however, and the team received big support, and it may be possible that Holy Cross will see its way clear to bring the Washington team up here. Georgetown has many alumni members in this State and this game would undoubtedly draw a big gate.

A game will have to be dropped, however, in order to take the Washington team on. The trouble that Holy Cross had up at Hanover, N. H., last year may make it possible for the Washington team to come down.

If Dartmouth will consent to play on Fitton Field negotiations will not be dropped, but it is the general belief that Dartmouth will not play at Worcester after that mixup at Hanover last year.

The game between Holy Cross and Technology is becoming a weaker attraction each year, and this game may be dropped. In the past few years football has taken a big boom at Holy Cross and a team that has proved to be many notches better than the Boston team has been developed and the annual game has been rather one-sided.

Schoolboy Sports

School athletics will start anew this week. The holiday vacation came to an end yesterday, and now schoolboy sports will be on the boom till next June. Track, hockey and basketball will receive all attention till Spring comes, and then baseball will fill out the school year.

Several good hockey games are on the [illegible] It is more than probable that several of the out of town games will be played. Rindge and Cambridge Latin are booked to clash at Cambridge, Milton High and Wellesley are down to play at Milton, and Chelsea is booked to play Medford at Medford.

The track candidates of the Boston high schools have two good board tracks to get workouts on. The city track on the Columbus avenue playgrounds is ready, as is the Irvington Street Oval. Both these places will be the scenes of great activity in a few days.

That the cross country run between Stoneham High and Melrose High may be run over. These schools met on the road a week ago and the boys finished with each eighteen points to their credit. Much interest is being manifested in cross country running by the boys and many are interested as to the outcome.

This has been the first Winter in many years that the schoolboys have not been able to get in their full schedule of games during the holiday vacation. In the few games that have been played the boys have shown lack of practice. Shooting in the gymnasium and cross-country running is good exercise, but team work and handling the puck is also required in the game.

English High has lost many a good athlete, the boys leaving and entering other schools. Powder Point has drawn many boys from the light and dark blue team. Arthur McPherson, the right halfback on the football team, and Al Cohen, centre, enter Powder Point this week. Jack Murphy, the big tackle, also enters that school. The first two named are good baseball players and Cohen was a candidate for the hockey team.

ROSS C. BARNES—NO. 11.

By SAM CRANE.

Ross Barnes, in the opinion of the players who played on the same clubs with him, and also those who were his opponents, was the best second baseman the game had produced, and there are, too, many old-time players and fans who have kept in touch with baseball for forty years or so, who still think that Barnes has never been excelled as a guardian of the keystone sack, even by the many stars in the position who have been before the public since.

Al Spalding, whose entire active baseball career was coincident with Barnes from the time they started to play the game as schoolboys away back in 1865, to the time they retired as players, about 1880, pronounced Ross Barnes one of the greatest second basemen of his time, and one of the best all-round players the game has ever [illegible].

Cal McVey, who played on the same teams with Barnes for many years, says "Ross Barnes has never been beaten as a second baseman."

Wright Praises Barnes.

George Wright says of Barnes: "The best man I ever played alongside of. He was a wonder."

The fans of the early days of the game were unanimous in the opinion that Barnes was the premier second baseman of the country, and it is the judgment of such people that we must go by.

I used to see Barnes play frequently while he was a member of the Boston Red Stockings and Chicago White Stockings and my youthful impression was that he was the best ever.

When Barnes joined the Bostons in 1871 he was just twenty-one years old and in his athletic prime. He was a fine looking man of [illegible] feet nine inches tall and weighed not far from 145 pounds. He was a natty dresser, in fact the "dude of the diamond," although I don't remember that "dude" had been invented at that time.

Possibly that euphonious title was kept under cover until the arrival of "Dude Esterbrook" on the scene of diamond activities. But Ross Barnes was a most wholesome looking young man; "a love of a fellow," as the fanesses of his day used to call him. And there were many fair admirers of baseball forty years ago, but not as many as now, unfortunately.

Keystone Sack Important Station.

At the time Barnes played second base the position was the most important on in the infield—the key to it, in fact—and more plays came the second baseman way than to any other infielder with the exception of the first baseman, but then about all the latter had to do was to take thrown balls and to field ground hits within a radius of his bag or not more than ten feet.

The shortstop of those days of forty years ago seldom covered second base to head off the base stealers on the throw from the catcher. The present style of play demands that the shortstop covers the bag even more frequently than the second baseman.

The old style, consequently, required the latter to cover all the ground between first and second bases, and on that account the guardian of the keystone sack must of necessity be the most active player on the line. A great ground coverer, good at either his right or left, quick of perception and always on the spot where the play took place in his extensive territory.

Well, Ross Barnes was all those, and then some. He could [illegible] a base runner quicker than any baseman I ever saw, and frequently he made his "tag" too quickly and deceived the umpire into believing he made a bluff touch. But in the long run Barnes did not lose by that fault, if it could be called such, for the wiley Ross fooled the umpires much oftener than they did him. In fact, Ross used to fool the players of his own team about touching.

Ross, too, was full of tricks [illegible] vent his opponents, at the [illegible] that he and George Wright [illegible] shortstop on the Bostons [illegible] now called "inside baseball" [illegible] future of opposing teams. In fact, Ross Barnes and George Wright were [illegible] whole team in themselves [illegible] double work, both in offense and defense, won many a hard-fought contest. They, too, together with Al Spalding, were the brains of the Boston club.

Big Four Jumped to Chicago.

In 1871 the Athletics of Philadelphia won the championship, but after that year the Bostons had no trouble in winning over all opponents until, in 1876, the original "big four," Barnes, Spalding, McVey and White, jumped to Chicago.

Barnes was a sensational player, but never played to the grand-stand. He delighted in playing the game, and because he loved it and put his whole soul into it he became one of the most famous players the game has produced.

He seemed to put just as much life and ginger into his practice as in the regular games, and in preliminary work before contests he took great pleasure in juggling the ball, as many players do in the present day.

Ross had one trick, that I remember well, of taking a throw from the catcher, tossing it backward between his legs and over his back into his hands again. I think Fred Pfeffer was the only player I ever saw perform the trick besides Barnes.

The little bits of side playing between Wright and Barnes while at preliminary practice were very amusing to the spectators. McGraw and several other players have followed up this line of business, and it is always an enjoyable prelude to games.

Barnes, when a schoolboy in Rockford, Ill., joined the Pioneers, a local junior club, of which Al Spalding was also a member. There were two other baseball organizations in the little town at a pilferer and when they were in doubt and asked him if he touched the runner he would say "no, I missed him by a yard."

But the double umpire system was not in vogue then, and it was Barnes's delight, as it was other players, to "work" the umps to the limit, and then give the kicking opponents the laugh. And none were more adept at it than Ross Barnes.

The time, and the schoolboys, having been uniformly successful in beating all other junior teams in their immediate neighborhood, became ambitious to tackle older teams.

Al Spalding, while under sixteen years of age, was a pitcher by instinct, and was the boxman of the Pioneers. Barnes and his pal, the tall, lanky twirler, took it into their youthful noddles that their nine could beat the Mercantiles, one of the other local clubs, and a challenge, as was the custom at the time, was sent to their older rivals.

The latter looked upon the defi as a boyish joke, but finally, under much chaffing, they accepted the challenge. Much to the embarrassment of the Mercantiles, "the kids" walloped the former to the tune of 26 to 2. That game was the start of Spalding and Barnes, who played the best ball for the Pioneers, on the road to the national fame that they afterward attained as professional baseball players.

The Forest Citys of Rockford, seeing what both Spalding and Barnes promised to become as players and possibly being a bit fearful that the Pioneers might take a fancy to issue another challenge to them, made overtures to the pair of kids and they became members of that club, [illegible] organization they both made famous [illegible] country over.

In 1868 the Forest Citys branched out [illegible] not a large [illegible] Illinois, and [illegible] record. And no [illegible] played was [illegible] to beat them until [illegible] Chicago, where the famed Chicago Excelsiors beat them twice [illegible] Forest Citys got even the next year by beating the same Excelsiors two games out of three in a series.

[illegible] Barnes [illegible] Forest Citys was the one [illegible] Nationals of Washington [illegible] July [illegible] 1867. It was the first extended trip any club had ever taken [illegible] Nationals [illegible] astonishing [illegible] and one-sided [illegible].

"Farmers" Beat Nationals.

They, of course, anticipated no trouble in defeating the Forest Citys, but much to their surprise and chagrin the "farmers" with Al Spalding [illegible] and Ross Barnes [illegible] beat them by the score of 29 to 23.

George Wright at that time was captain and shortstop of the Nationals. And to make Forest City's victory more noteworthy the Nationals turned around the next day and walloped the far-famed Chicago Excelsiors by [illegible] score of 49 to 4.

The Forest Citys continued in existence and increased their already big reputation. They made trips both to the East and West and defeated the strongest clubs in the country in both sections.

Professionalism in baseball was becoming to be recognized as legitimate in 1870, and in 1871 [illegible] all of the most prominent [illegible] throughout the country came [illegible] flatfooted and acknowledged they were [illegible] paid players. Ross Barnes was, of course, in big demand, for he had developed [illegible] into one of the best [illegible] players and both he and Al Spalding accepted an offer to play with the Boston team. Harry Wright engaged the players and was manager of the Bostons and that same year, 1871, adopted the name "Red Stockings," as the famous Cincinnati Club that had carried the name so honorably had disbanded in the Fall of the year previous.

Barnes, while in Boston in 1871, 1872, 1873, 1874 and 1875, increased his standing as a player and led the league in batting several seasons. The "fair foul" hit helped him materially to reach the top in hitting, and on account of his rare ability at making it the rule was made abolishing the hit as fair.

The Boston team during the last four years of Barnes's connection with it was so uniformly successful in winning pennants that it became monotonous even to Hub fans the [illegible] and the attendance fell off amazingly.

MURPHY TO TRAIN PHILADELPHIA TEAM

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—"Mike" Murphy, the athletic trainer of the University of Pennsylvania, will go to Hot Springs with the Philadelphia National League baseball team, and will supervise the Spring training of the players. Mr. Murphy will be the trainer of the American team which will compete in the Olympic games in Sweden the coming Summer.

DYSON-HOUCK DRAW.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 3.—Young Dyson of Providence and Tommy Houck of Philadelphia fought a twenty-round draw at the Rhode Island Athletic Club. The fight for the first fifteen rounds was slow and uninteresting, with Houck having a slight advantage. Houck was unmarked, while Dyson had an old cut over one eye reopened.

REDS TO TRAIN IN ATLANTA.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 3.—The Cincinnati Club has closed a deal for the use of the Columbus, Ga., ball grounds as training quarters for the team. The Reds will go South February 26 and remain there twenty days.

Walsh Out for Win Over Lynch in Bout To-night

By JACK CONWAY.

Whether or not Alf Lynch will ever become an international figure in the bantamweight class will be definitely settled when he clashes with Jimmy Walsh at the American A. C. to-night. The bout is scheduled to go eight rounds, and if Lynch can hold his own with Walsh he will be in line for bigger bouts.

Lynch is recognized as the bantamweight champion of Canada. He is a shifty boxer and a hard hitter. Al's legs are like those of a 105-pounder, while he has the shoulders of a featherweight. The Canadian is credited with packing a good wallop.

In the past Walsh has been pitted against a number of men who were hailed as terrific punchers, but when they were forced to contend with Walsh's wonderful skill they looked like amateurs.

Jimmy Clever Boxer.

Jimmy is one of the cleverest men in the ring. He is a veteran at the game and may always be relied upon to make a good showing. Walsh is now claiming the bantamweight championship and is after a match with Johnny Coulon of Chicago, who has got an impression that he is the best bantamweight boxer that ever came over the pike.

Walsh recently defeated Jim Kendrick of England in decisive manner at the American A. C. The Briton came to this burg with a big reputation, but he was only a child in the hands of Walsh.

Unless Lynch shows exceptional form he will be defeated. Walsh is now in the best of condition and ready to meet the leading men in his class.

The semi-final bout of the evening looks like the real thing with Young Jasper and Young Clancy, both of the North End, down on the card to swap wallops. The boys met at the West End [illegible] several weeks ago and [illegible] a slashing bout.

Both lightweights have been training hard for to-night's mill. Jasper says that he will win by a wide margin. Clancy is just as confident as Jasper and is not bashful [illegible] give Jasper the w[illegible]

Jasper Should Win.

Jasper should be returned the winner. When he last fought Clancy he was not in the best of condition. For the past week he has been training with Eddie Murphy and Johnny Connolly at the Armory Club and is in the pink of condition.

"Spider" Murphy will be give a chance to redeem himself when he clashes with Patsey Meade in one of the preliminaries. Last Thursday Murphy was knocked out in one round by Young Carlo.

There will be another preliminary between Joe Bloom of Philadelphia and Harold Edison of Weymouth.

Johnny Connolly, the Scotch lightweight champion, is a big favorite over Bay Woods in their bout at New Bedford to-night. Connolly is out to win by a K. O. Woods will be seconded by Martin Canole, the old-time lightweight. Martin has met Connolly and should be able to tip Woods off as to the Scotchman's weak points. Connolly is one of the classiest young lightweights in New England. His last big bout was with Dave Deshler, and he was awarded a draw after fifteen rounds of terrific battling. If Connolly defeats Woods, he will try and get a match with Young Donahue of Roxbury.

A big crowd of fistic "fans" are sure to be on hand when Kid Scaler and Young McDonough give battle at Manchester this evening. A great deal of rivalry exists between the two fighters. The men met once before and the affair was declared a draw.

Tommy Flanagan is out with a challenge to meet the best bantamweight in New England. Tommy is a pretty busy individual these days. He meets Ted Raymond in the semi-final bout at Lowell Friday night, while on Monday he journeys down to Newburyport where he clashes with Young Al Belmont.

Jack Dillon is beginning to loom up as a pretty important individual in the middleweight division as a result of his decent victory over Leo Houck the other night.

SPORTING BRIEFS

Joseph D. H[illegible]gaton, vice-commodore for two years, has been elected commodore of the Lynn Yacht Club. William A. Cann, former commodore of the West Lynn Yacht Club, was elected vice-commodore; Ernest E. Peale, secretary; Fred L. Ingalls, treasurer, and William P[illegible]son, fleet captain.

Harry Stiles of Allston, who is a member of the Brae Burn Country club, is forming a league to be known as the Boston Hockey League. Stiles expects to have teams from Wellesley, Dorchester, Cambridge, Somerville, Medford, Milton and Brookline in the new organization. The new league will play on outdoor rinks.

Boston sporting men heard with regret to-day of the death of Joseph E. O. Ryan, known on two continents as wit, newspaper and publicity man, who was found dead in his apartments at the Congress hotel, Chicago.

The South Boston Yacht club will hold its annual election of officers to-night. The following are the candidates: Commodore, John M. Burke; Vice Commodore, John J. Tobin; Treasurer, W. X. McKee, and Trustee, M. J. Lynch.

In the sixty-second game of the Class C amateur billiard tourney at the Elite, Maynard defeated Malo, 150 to 100.

The following officers have been elected by the Medford Boat Club: Commodore, M. W. Holbrook; vice-commodore, P. A. Goodale; secretary, H. S. Perrin; treasurer, Richard G. Saville; executive committee, R. B. Lawrence, B. S. Jacobs, Jr., John B. Howard, Captain C. W. Brainard; regatta committee, D. C. Collier, G. H. Pickham and H. W. Smith; house committee, M. W. Leavitt, A. K. Bowen, R. Walsh.

Everett Bacon, quarterback on the Wesleyan football squad, is the most likely candidate for captain of the team, the election of which will be held in a few days.

Fr. Stanton, who is in charge of the Ottawa University hockey team, is a great fan and thorough sportsman.

BOUTS TO-NIGHT.

Jimmy Walsh vs. Alf Lynch; Young Clancy vs. Young Jasper; Joe Blum vs. Harold Edison; Pat Meda vs. Spider Murphy, at the American A. C.

Young McDonough vs. Kid Scaler, Manchester, N. H.

Johnny Connolly vs. Bay Woods, New Bedford.

Jeff O'Connell vs. Jake Abel, Nashville.

BIG PURSE UP FOR WRESTLERS

Raicevich and Romanoff have another leg to fight for when they clash in their wrestling bout at Mechanics Building on Friday evening. The [illegible] of Chicago will set up a purse of $[illegible] for the winner of the match to meet Petersen, a Chicago grappler. This makes the bout more interesting for both men will fight to the limit to get the chance to draw down the big money. The winner [illegible] also get a chance to grapple with the great Zbyszko.

This match is the most interesting ever pulled off in this city. The men are up among the leaders in the wrestling game and are exceptionally big men. The bout is the most-talked about affair held here [illegible] years and all indications point toward a packed house. The men are putting on the lasting bits of training, and when they go on the mat they will both be in the very best condition.

The semi-final match between Cyclone Burns and Nogert is also attracting a lot of attention. Both men are high class wrestlers and will put up a hard battle.

ROLLER WINNER OVEP SENDRELLY ON MAT

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 3.—Dr. Benjamin F. Roller of Chicago defeated the Turkish wrestler, Mehmed Sendrelly, in a hard-fought wrestling match in Graves Hall. Roller secured his first fall in 58 minutes with a toe hold and the second in 18 minutes with a half Nelson and crotch hold. In the first half the Turk, it is charged, bit Roller in the [illegible]. Roller will meet Ivan Romanoff, the Russian champion, the last of the month.

BURNS IS VICTOR OVER YOUNG KURTZ

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Kid Burns of the East Side outpointed Young Kurtz of Newark in the main bout of 10 rounds at Brown's Gymnasium. At the start the boxing was even, both boys showing plenty of speed. From the fourth round to the end, however, Burns took the upper hand and w[illegible] his opponent continually with a left jab.

MADDEN AND WHITE ARE AFTER MATCHES

Joe White and Jeff Madden, both of South Boston, are looking for matches. White is trying to get a bout with Johnny Connolly of Scotland, who meets Bay Woods at New Bedford to-night, while Madden is after the scalp of Andy Morris or Al Benedict. When Madden and Morris last met the Noddle Islander won. Madden says that he will reverse the tables if he can get Morris into a ring again.

$10,000 TO BACK MORRIS IN BOUT WITH PALZER

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—F. B. Ufer, backer of Carl Morris, has posted $10,000 with Billy Newman, the manager of Morris, to be used to convince Al Palzer that the Oklahoma hope is willing and anxious to fight him. The money goes for a bout of either ten or twenty rounds, the latter preferred, to be held anywhere. The only condition is that Tommy O'Rourke, Palzer's manager, give a side bet of $5,000 or $10,000.

COACH KENDALL MAY QUIT MEDFORD HIGH

Coach Ralph Kendall of the Medford High School athletic teams may resign his position as coach and teacher when the baseball season closes next June, as he has received many tempting offers to handle college and school football teams next Fall. While he has not given any official notification to the school authorities, it became known that he is considering two or three good positions for next Fall.

TWO STARS FOR FOGEL.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—President Horace Fogel of the Phillies has announced that he had signed Adnie Brennan, the star left hander, who did such splendid work with the Buffalo team of the International League, and Arthur Rasmussen, the big pitcher of the Vancouver team of the Pacific Coast League. Rasmussen's home is in Tronle, Ia. Brennan's home is at Lahart, Kan.

TICKET PROBE IS EXPECTED

The National Commission is in session in Cincinnati to-day. There is a possibility that there will be some startling announcements made before the meeting adjourns. Some definite announcement is liable to be made in regard to the ticket scandal in connection with the world series last Fall.

Ban Johnson may make a reply to the charges of President Brush of the New York Nationals. In his letter, Brush called the leader of the American League to task for the way the tickets had been sold in Philadelphia. At the time, Johnson made no reply to Brush's letter.

There are many people who believe that Brush gave out the letter in order to stall off any investigation which might not prove advantageous to the interests of the New York club. It is queer how Brush knows [illegible] while he is so lacking in a knowledge of what is going on in his own organization.

[illegible] the Nationals [illegible] which was held in New York, President [illegible] of the National League and Herrmann of the Cincinnati club, both members of the commission, [illegible] to reveal any [illegible] on the part of the officials of the New York club.

President Ban Johnson of the younger [illegible] if he was supported by Lynch and Herrmann, he would [illegible] to prove that the New York club was in on the ticket scalping. But, according to Ban, both of these gentlemen acted as attorneys for the defence.

The commission may also make some announcement in regard to the schedule for this season. Last week the joint schedule committee of the National and American Leagues met secretly at French Lick, Ind., and arranged all of the minor details of the work. This committee would not make any public announcements of the drafts for the coming season other than that the seasons of both the National and American Leagues would close rather early so as to permit the world series games to begin a week or ten days earlier than usual.

It is believed that the season will close on or [illegible] after October 1. A schedule of 154 games will be played by each major league. [illegible] will necessitate the usual early start, about April 12. It is understood that the schedules will be almost identical with those of two years ago.

Baseball Notes

Somehow or other that third league talk doesn't stir up much excitement. Maybe the fans have not forgotten one Fletcher, who was doing a big business along about this time last year.

Willie Keeler, the former star, would like to manage a minor league team next year.

Manager Harry Davis, apparently, is going to make a social campaign in Cleveland. He recently became an Elk and then joined the Cleveland Athletic Club.

They can't convince Harry Steinfeldt, the Rustler player, that he is through as a major. Rochester attempted to sign him, but Harry refused and said that he would play on with some big league team.

McGraw says that the Cubans will not be good fans for some time. The boss of the Giants claims that the Cubans go to ball games to bet instead of to watch the play.

What do you think of this? President Brush has complained to Mayor Gaynor that cows are allowed to stray on his Polo Grounds. We were always under the impression that New York was a real city and that they at least had city ordinances prohibiting live stock from wandering. They have them in Kalamazoo and Oshkosh.

The Red Sox seem to be cornering the prize dates for next Summer. In addition to landing King Day in Chicago (a tribute to Jake Stahl, the born leader), Bobby McRoy has secured the date with the Athletics for the raising of the world's championship pennant.

Tom Jones, formerly with the Browns and later with the Tigers, will be made field captain of the Browns next year. Duffy will have to have a captain, since he will be a bench manager, and Jones will be the man.

Some of those Milwaukee newspapers are preparing to give Duffy a fine reception. They are panning him because he failed to buy a lot of ball players or trade them. And Hugh hasn't even taken charge.

They certainly do lead Charles W. Murphy of the Cubs a merry life. It was announced that Charles Murphy, the Tammany leader, was interested along with Gaffney in the purchase of the Boston National League Club. Many of the newspapers will not have it so. Instead of the Tammany Murphy they say that it was the West Side magnate who put up the money.

It's great to be the manager of a tail end club. Bobby Wallace, manager of the Browns, announced that he would let ten or fifteen go and immediately he was ad[illegible] to [illegible] every [illegible] on his roster to depart and recruit an entirely new team. Upon the theory, of course, that he would be bound to get a better club than the one which represented St. Louis last year.

Clark Griffith, manager of the Senators, met Germany Schaefer, who is spending the Winter on the stage, after a matinee. "How did you like it?" queried Schaefer. "I still think you are a good ball player," answered Griff.

Pitcher Coombs of the Athletics has fully recovered from the injury to his hip he received in the last world's series.

SWEEPING DEFI BY CHRISTOPHER

John Christopher, the crack local bowler, issues a sweeping challenge through the AMERICAN, in which he states that he is willing to meet anyone in New England, anywhere at any time, for any amount of money, and roll any number of strings. Christopher defies the best rollers in any of the six States. He has never been defeated in a single-man match and is the holder of many records. John has been hitting the pins at a terrific gait lately, and bids fair to make the match interesting for the best of them. This is a good chance for some of the best rollers to get a chance at John, especially Archie Walsh and Paul Poehler.

SULLIVAN BATTLES WHITE AT PLYMOUTH

Jim Sullivan of Boston will clash with Joe White of South Boston in the main bout of twelve rounds at the Plymouth Armory to-night. Both boys are rugged battlers. White is a regular rough house artist and may be relied upon to make a good showing. Several good preliminaries have been arranged. Plymouth has been getting some good cards lately, and a great deal of interest has been displayed in the boxing game by the fight fans around Plymouth.

ARLINGTON DEFEATS STONEHAM SEVEN 5-0

In the first hockey game of the season on Spy Pond, Arlington, the home team defeated Stoneham High 5 to 0. Captain [illegible] and Lowe played a strong defensive [illegible] and stopped almost every rush of the opponents. The best work for Stoneham was done by Holden, Dempsey, Mirick and Hansell.

MILTON HIGH SEVEN OPENS WITH VICTORY

Milton High opened its hockey season at the Cunningham Gym by defeating the Boston College High School seven by the score of 2 to 1. The defensive work of Gerards and Crafts excelled for Milton and also that of Hunt for Boston College.

BOWLERS BUSY IN CITY LEAGUE

The City League matches to-night will be the last of the second round. Many of the fans are looking for a big shift in the league standing as Carruth tackles a hard opponent in Adams Square to-night and the following night rolls Chauncy at the latter's alleys.

Whether or not Carruth can stand the strain of these matches on two successive nights remains to be seen. The Hanover street men are not talking but confident that they will pull through with victories in both cases.

Adams Square has not shown anything wonderful in the last two matches, having dropped seven out of the eight points and unless it sets a faster pace on its home alleys to-night it hardly can expect to cause the leaders much trouble.

Chester Carruth says that the short rest has helped his men a great deal and that they are ready to give the pins a [illegible] show [illegible] to-night. Pat [illegible] has the same [illegible] as Chester and is sure [illegible] over [illegible] every [illegible]. Harry O'Brien will make his second appearance of the year with the Carruth team and many are expecting a wonderful showing from the "come back."

Elite in Feature Match.

While it hardly can be said as many fans will attend the Elite-Murray & Irwin match as will the Carruth-Adams Square match the former is looked upon as the feature match of the night. Elite has a good crowd of supporters who are sure to be there strong for Billy Ferris's boys to-night.

Elite will have to show a big improvement if it expects to get an even break with Miah Murray's men. The men from Washington street have on more than one occasion this season shown themselves to be woefully lacking good rolling on foreign alleys. Unless this point is improved upon, as many are looking for to-night, the Elite aggregation will have to fight hard to hold its position in the first division.

Kerrigan and Charlie Gangi are the only ones of the quintet that have shown any form away from home. However, it hardly can be said that the former man is always good, but is generally there in a pinch. Anchorman Cole missed many easy spares in the Boylston [illegible] partly through excitement, [illegible] can be said that Charlie loses [illegible] very often. Ayer's weak point is getting the end pin on the left side of the alley. A right handed bowler cannot curve a ball to any extent and get an end pin. With these points improved upon, Murray & Irwin is sure to find Elite a stiff combination.

Taylor Shows Up Well.

Murray & Irwin is always sure of giving its opponents a stiff match. Taylor, who replaced Walter Kirk at anchor, has shown up well, and is sure to be a valuable substitute to Kirk the rest of the season. Dickjost, who is taking Taylor's place, can always be relied upon.

Jack Steare's Boylston team is sure to have plenty of trouble with the Hayward quintet at the latter's alleys to-night. The former team is pressing Murray & Irwin for second position, and a clean sweep would land them in that place in case of a blow-up by the Murray quintet.

Plenty of excitement is assured the fans at the match between Tom McCarthy's Pets and Bill Beatty's Hustlers at the Chauncy alleys this evening. The McCarthy team is confident, after its great showing against Adams Square, and will put the Chauncy men to a good test.

Chauncy, on the other hand, is expecting to have an easy time with the tail-enders. Chauncy has been coming along like a streak of lightning, having won thirteen out of the last sixteen points, and is confident that it will be able to keep up its winning streak.

The Ottawa University hockey team will try hard to even up matters with the local players to-night when it clashes with the B. A. A. seven. The Intercolonials took a fall out on the Canadian team to the tune of 7 to 1 on Monday evening, but the visitors are sure that they will be able to redeem themselves on the ice when it stacks up against the B. A. A. team.

In the game Monday evening the Ottawa team showed streaks of great hockey, but [illegible]. With the [illegible] a good practice session yesterday the team will be better [illegible] for a good game.

The Canadian team is mad after a victory over the B. A. A. team, for the players do not want to go back to their home town with two defeats. The men will play their hardest and try out everything to prove the winners. The game is sure to be hard fought. The players are all fast and can shoot good from all angles and they will give the Boston team a lot of trouble.

The B. A. A. team will go into the game determined to pile up a larger score than the Intercolonials. Seven points is hard to beat, but nevertheless all the players will go after it. The Boston team will be stronger to-night than it was last Saturday, for the players are used to each other and the change in the lineup will be more familiar.

ALL STAR CARD AT LAWRENCE CLUB

Jim Crilley has arranged a corking good all-star card for his Lawrence club to-morrow night. There will be three bouts pulled off and they will each go ten rounds. Young McDonough of Manchester, N. H., and Terry Brooks of New York will meet in the wind-up. McDonough fights Kid Scaler at Manchester to-morrow night but he is confident that he will come out of this battle without any injuries. Dick Pollard of this city will meet Kid Carter of Pawtucket in another ten-round scrap. The curtain raiser will be a ten-round mill between Tommy Carson of Lawrence and Teddy Murphy of Boston. Both of these boys are well known to fight fans.

How to Be Chic—Zina Brozia, Hailed as One of the Loveliest Women on the Grand Opera Stage, Tells

"How I Won My Way to Beauty"

ZINA BROZIA'S ADVICE TO WOMEN

It takes more brains to be a fascinating woman than it does to be a professor at a woman's college.

The fascinating woman is always good tempered.

The woman who lets a man think he has fascinated her must give up all hopes of netting him by her own attributes.

NUMBER FIVE

By ZINA BROZIA

TO be calm and fascinating it is not necessary to be beautiful, but you do have to be clever. It takes more brains to be a fascinating woman than it does to be a professor at a woman's college. The rewards are infinitely greater.

In Paris, if a woman is fascinating she can marry whom she pleases and attain wealth. If she is merely intelligent in a scholarly way her only reward is the scholar's own approval and a stipend a little above starvation.

What [illegible] to be fascinating? you ask. [illegible] is you go about [illegible] of men?

I have [illegible] the essential the careful toilet. Later I shall go into the secrets of the toilet in more detail.

Even [illegible] things for example [illegible]

The fascinating woman is always good tempered. No matter what happens, she must never get angry, peeved, sulky or irritated. Inwardly she may be desirous of tearing out the eyes of the male thing that is annoying her, but she does not show it.

Good temper is the sine qua non of fascination. [illegible] And yet a woman must not allow presumption upon her good nature. There are times when a touch of hauteur is as attractive as a smile.

The fascinating woman must be unselfish. Her ultimate aim may be extremely selfish, but to gain it she must take care [illegible] discover she thinks first [illegible] and then of his.

[illegible] interesting, and to do this it may be necessary to read up a bit upon the things that interest him. Much read [illegible]. A clever woman may have the merest smattering of information upon a certain subject. If she introduces it into the conversation the man will take it for granted she knows all about it. The rest of the time all she need to do is to follow the course of the conversation closely enough to say yes and no at the right time.

You see the fascinating woman must be at once beautiful and interesting, and it is the combination that causes the difficulty.

She must let it be subtly seen that the man she is working with pleases her a bit. No man considers a woman chic who has not betrayed some slight interest in himself. And yet the woman who lets a man think he has fascinated her must give up all hopes of netting him by her own artifices.

She must be a reader of character, for no two men are alike, and what one considers bold another thinks is attractive, and what one believes to be charm may be thought vanity by another.

Above all things the fascinating woman must not appear vain. A conceited girl is an abomination. How often do you hear men say:

"Oh, yes, she is pretty; but she knows it."

Of course she knows it, but the male creatures are innocent enough to think there are pretty women who don't know it. The clever woman may be full of conceit, but she must appear quite modest and unassuming.

Everything resolves itself into acting, you see. A woman must not be herself, have a free, unconscious moment when she is in the presence of man, and when she is alone she must be rehearsing.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LOVE NEVER DOUBTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty and I am in love with a girl of eighteen and have been out with her to places of amusement. All my friends and relatives are continually advising me to try to forget her, as she is not worthy of me, but I cannot.

She is not aware of my friends advice, and they cannot give me reasons for not thinking her worthy of me.

L. I. K.

HOW wrong to doubt the girl you love without cause!

You never should believe such things against anyone dear to you without sufficient proof.

Such a statement as your friends make is not worthy of consideration and you do not deserve a woman's love when you let yourself doubt her.

Put yourself in her place and you will realize how you are wronging her. The love you gave her is very mean if it does not include honor and respect.

HER HONESTY IS COMMENDABLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty. I have been keeping company with a young lady two years my junior. I love her [illegible] one day she told [illegible] as a friend. If it were not for my mother, I don't know what I would do.

FLOYD ROBERTSON.

THE girl is right and I am glad to hear that she considers you as a friend and nothing more. That is just as it should be, and you have every reason to be contented.

You may be in love with her, but are you in a position to marry her?

If you are, ask her to marry you; if not, you must not speak of your love to her. For the present you have her sincere regard; her friendship for you proves that; do all in your power to gain her admiration; respect her above all and I think, with the aid of your friendship, you will eventually win her love.

The Fable of the Wise Dame

By DOROTHY DIX

ONCE upon a time there was a young Maiden who was overloaded with Romance and Sentiment. She was one of those Moon Eyed Females whose hair always seems to be Coming Down, and who Pass Up Straight Fronts in favor of Greek Draperies that look as if they needed to make a Trip to the Laundry.

In spite of this Affliction the Maiden was blessed with so much Pulchritude that a Worthy and Industrious Green Grocer, who did not know when he was well off, hunted Trouble by greatly desiring to marry her.

Unfortunately Nature had not framed up the Green Grocer upon Romantic Specifications. When it came to chasing the Almighty Dollar he was a long-distance sprinter, but he had nary a yearn except for his Dinner, and the sight of the Amethystine Sea never filled him with anything but Seasickness.

When the Maiden compared him with her Booth Tarkington Ideals he did not fit in a single Particular, and so she turned him down good and hard when he tried to get an Option on her for Life.

This greatly grouched her Mother, who was a foxy old Dame, who had lived in this Vale of Tears long enough to know that a Husband who is a Good Provider is worth all the Romantic Heroes on the Cinder Path, and so she took her Daughter aside, and thus communed with her:

What She Said

"I do not desire," she said, "to influence your Young Affections, nor to dictate your Choice, but I have a Curiosity to know what sort of a Matrimonial Hunch you have up your sleeve that causes you to hand the Ice to a Warm Proposition like the Green Grocer. Foolish Creature, do you not know that if you marry him you will be able to Automobile through Life and Wear Clothes that will give every other Female Heart Failure every time she looks at you?"

"That is true," replied the Maiden, "but I have a Romantic Soul that scorns the Vulgarity of Trade, and I could not even enjoy Spending money that smelt of Cabbages and Onions. I must have something that deals with the Higher Side of Life in mine, and no one who is not in a Learned Profession need apply."

"Forget it," cried the Mother, "the Dough's the Thing, not how you get it."

"Furthermore," continued the Maiden, "I apprehend that the Tired Business Man is not an Exciting Companion with whom to Spend your Evenings."

"Imbecile," exclaimed the Mother, "do you not know that it is only the Unfortunate Poor who have to spend their Evenings together? People in Comfortable Circumstances never have to Undergo this Terrible Suffering. Believe me, it is much more important for Your Friends to have Entertaining Husbands than to have one Yourself."

Nevertheless the Maiden refused to Hearken to her Mother's Advice, but as she felt a Trifle Uncertain on the Marriage Proposition, and was devoted to a Search for her Ideal, she packed her trunk and hiked out West where Marriage licenses are sold with Divorce Coupons attached.

She Gets Experience

After some years of Variegating and Checkered Domestic Career she returned Home, and was Affectionately Welcomed by her Mother.

"I perceive," said the Mother, "from your numerous Wedding Cards that you have been somewhat of a Marrier, and I would like to ask if you have ever found your Ideal?"

"I found several of Him," returned the Daughter, "but, alas, the Road to Happiness is always strewn with Tacks. My first husband was a Clergyman who won my Heart by Spieling to me of Spiritual Things, but when we were married I found that I had to Dress according to the Congregation's Taste, and that got upon my Nerves, so that I threw up the Job.

"Next I married a Doctor, but all of his time was spent in making Professional Calls, and keeping Dinner waiting, and as I did not desire to spend my Life eating Cold Victuals I cut that out.

"Then I [illegible] a lawyer, but he was [illegible] refused to tell his little Tootsy Wootsie all the Secret Proceedings in his Divorce [illegible] and as I [illegible] there should be Perfect Confidence between Husband and Wife, I passed him up, too.

"My next Experience in the Holy Estate was with a Novelist, and all went well until I began comparing myself with his Heroines who were all tall and slender, with [illegible] hair and Melting Blue Eyes. I do not answer to that Description by a Year and a half, and as I did not care to have a Rival who made me look like [illegible] I resigned.

"I also ascertained that my Dream of Bliss as a Politician's Wife was a Pipe Dream, for my Husband kept the Glad Hand for the Public and never extended it at Home. Finally, I married a Musician with whom I expected to Exist in Perfect Harmony, but, unhappily, we found out that our Natures were Tuned in different Keys, and when he began chasing a High C Affinity I threw up my hands and Quit the [illegible]

"That will be about all the Romance in Mine. What I am looking for now is a Grovelling Creature who will charge my Virtues and Faults up to Profit and Loss, and Strike a good General Average, and who is willing to stake me to Bargain Money."

[illegible] the Green Grocer, who was so Stupid he had remained Faithful to her Memory, and they lived Happily ever after.

Moral: This fable teaches that the Business Man is the Preferred Matrimonial Risk.

The Story of the New Play by George Broadhurst

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

THE opening scene of the story is laid in a cheap Harlem flat, the home of Virginia Blaine, a beautiful [illegible] girl of sixteen and the heroine of the story. John Blaine, Virginia's father, is a struggling lawyer. A few days before Virginia's graduation her father arrives home very ill. The next day he dies. This leaves Virginia, her mother and her younger sister, Fanny, with but $1,500, which represents the life insurance left by their father. With the money they start a little millinery business. But the work is too much for Mrs. Blaine, and, after a brief illness, she, too, dies. The illness of their mother brings added expense to the girls, so that their little capital is swept away and they are forced to borrow money on their millinery business.

The panic of 1907 sweeps down upon them and they are unable to collect from their customers. Finally a deputy marshal takes possession of the store.

Now Go On With the Story

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By John A. Moroso

PART ONE—(Continued)

"WE are thrown out," sobbed Virginia. "It's all over, Fanny. God knows what we shall do. We are put in the streets and just because there are some women [illegible] to steal from us to put new [illegible] their heads."

The deputy marshal had not grown altogether callous in the pursuit of his ugly business. The sobs of Virginia made him feel uneasy.

"Maybe your old man can help you out someway if he's got a job and a good boss," he suggested.

"My father is dead," Virginia told him.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he said. "I might have known it by the black clothes."

"The clothes are for my mother, who died a little while ago," explained Virginia.

"Orphans," said the deputy marshal under his breath. "Good Lord, how bad! I wish I could help them."

Virginia rose from her chair and dried her eyes.

"I suppose we can take our clothes with us?" she asked.

"Yes'm."

"Well, please have a seat outside, and we will prepare to go," she told him.

He went, but as he passed Fanny he winked and hooked a thumb to her, signifying that he wanted her to follow him.

Fanny saw the signal and followed.

"Say, little girl," whispered the agent of the law when they were out of the hearing of Virginia, "you're a bright little piece. Now look here and follow me, see? I'm very near-sighted. I can't see three feet at times. If you can find anything you can [illegible] and raise some money on [illegible] and beat it. Put on the best hat in the shop when you leave, and stick your Tam o' Shanter in your kick. Do you get me?"

"I get you," replied Fanny. "You're all right, you are."

So Fanny put on the best hat in the place, stuck her Tam in her pocket and determined to raise a few dollars in that way.

In the little back room Virginia had packed up their things in two grips. Even the new-bought groceries were stowed away for food on the morrow.

Fanny Vows to "Land a Job"

"I have $25 in cash," she told Fanny. "We will share a hall bedroom somewhere and start out early in the morning to hunt for jobs."

"And we'll land 'em, too, Virgie," replied Fanny with spirit. "Just you stop this crying business. It isn't any time to cry now. We've got to get busy. You just watch your sister Fanny land a place. I've just got to land it and I'll land it, too. If necessary I'll marry Jimmie Gilley [illegible] twelve a week [illegible] on that."

The two girls left the place, each carrying [illegible]

Homeless and without a friend and with no one they could call on for shelter, they faced the great city with all its turmoil and temptations, its glare, its fascinations and its revolting things. They turned down Amsterdam avenue, walked a few blocks, and then turned into a side street. On the window of an old-fashioned house [illegible]

FURNISHED ROOMS

They entered and paid two dollars for a tiny room on the top floor. They would have shelter for a week at any rate.

Fanny examined the gas jet critically.

"She'll do very well," she finally announced.

"Do what, Fanny?" her sister asked.

"Why I could cook a turkey on that gas jet if I had one," Fanny replied.

A Hunt for a Job

FOR the first half of the day, Virginia remained in the little furnished room and studied the "help wanted" advertisements. She had a vague notion that she might find a place as governess in some wealthy family, a place where she would have refined surroundings and an opportunity to study.

But the panic of 1907 was a rich man's panic and people of wealth had been hard hit. Instead of hiring governesses they were dismissing them and getting along without their help. In the grade of high class employment, the advertisements for help were very few. With pencil and paper she went through the lists and made notes of [illegible] answer either by [illegible] person.

The little shops on Amsterdam avenue were just opening for the day when Virginia entered one of them to buy pen, ink and note paper. She doled out her small change grudgingly and then hurried back to her lodging house.

Fanny was already up and busy. From a fellow woman lodger she had borrowed a tiny cooking device which fitted to the top of their gas jet.

Breakfast on a Gas Jet

"Hello, Virgie," she called cheerily. "Make yourself comfortable, breakfast will be ready in a moment. Shut the door and lower the window from the top. If the landlady smells the cooking she might kick. We've got to break her in gently. After a week we'll be cooking banquets on this gas jet. I know a hardware shop where you get a burner that will cook anything from a loaf of bread to a fried egg."

She chatted away as she boiled a cereal, laid out her little store of things to eat and prepared the meal.

As Virginia wrote her replies to the advertisements she had chosen to answer, she thought with fear in her what would [illegible] They must get work within three weeks for their little money would be exhausted by that time. They would have to save on car fare and every day would be a day of tramping up and down the great city, going from pillar to post, begging work and a chance to be self-supporting.

How many hundreds and thousands of girls have done it and failed to stick it through until exhaustion sent them to public hospitals or morgues! And what became of those who quit the struggle? Virginia knew only too well. She shuddered, not for herself—for she felt that she could go through with it to the bitter end—but for Fanny, who was so young and bright and [illegible] and pretty.

To those human vultures who sit and watch and wait for a girl of the shops to stumble and fall Fanny would be fine prey. The fear in her heart deepened. Her hand trembled as she wrote, and on her lips came a prayer for help.

Tears welled to Virginia's eyes and finally she dropped her head into the bend of her arm and cried softly.

Fanny was serving the cereal and pouring from a jar of milk when she saw her sister weeping.

"Say [illegible]" commanded brusquely, putting down the things in her hands. "You've GOT to stop this crying thing. What's the matter with you, anyhow? You're not sick and, although you are my big sister, and the head of the family, I'll just let you understand that the time hasn't come for crying with me."

"I am crying because of you," sobbed Virginia. "I love you so and I don't want harm ever to touch you."

Fanny Maps Out a Plan.

"Now, look here, Virgie," protested Fanny. "It's foolish to be crying for me. I can take good care of myself, and, believe me, I'm going to hold up my end in this game. As soon as I get something to eat, and get all my hair pinned on, I'm going to look up Mr. James Gilley, my husband-to-be, if he gets a decent raise in pay, and I'm going to talk over things with him and then hop out after a job. He is a man of ideas."

Virginia dried her tears.

The two girls used the one chair in the room for a table and then, seating them[illegible] the side of the bed, had their [illegible] breakfast.

"Now, Virgie," declared the younger girl, "stake me to thirty cents. You needn't look for me until sunset. Mr. James Gilley and I will have a talk, and then I'm going after that job. Until we both get work we'll stay right here and do all the cooking, washing and sleeping and planning right here. This is home for us. I will expect you back at 6 o'clock."

Fanny had disposed of her share of the breakfast [illegible] appetite of [illegible]

[illegible] goodby and sailed out of the room, her pretty eyes dancing, as she smiled, under her Tam o' Shanter.

The Man of Ideas

JAMES GILLEY, twenty years old and fully convinced that he was a man of brains, held down the job of third assistant shipping clerk in the wholesale grocery store of Hart & Shafter, west of Broadway, in the lower part of Manhattan and on the edge of what was old Greenwich Village.

The major part of his duties consisted in using a brush and stencil, stamping on the names and addresses of established customers, on barrels and boxes of sugar and spice and everything nice came out of the storerooms.

He was a very serious and knowing young man, and fully realized that the nature of his employment was far below the class of work his natural abilities should be offered.

When there was no stenciling to be done Jimmie would perch on a box in the sun and devise means of making a great fortune. When he wearied of this he would go over [illegible] from the entire business [illegible] of the firm which employed him, and he would devise means of reconstructing the business.

Jimmie was thus engaged when a slap on the shoulder brought him out of his dreams, and, with great indignation, to his feet.

Who dared be familiar with James Gilley, Esquire?

He distorted his rather lean face into a frown as he turned.

"What's the idea now, Jimmie?"

It was Fanny's voice, and Fanny stood there before him in the sunlight, laughing at his pretentions of anger.

"Oh, it is you, eh?" exclaimed the third assistant shipping clerk. "What are you doing this far downtown?"

"I need advice, Jimmie," she told him.

"Ah," quoth Jimmie, complacently. He pulled out a dollar watch and studied the dial.

"It is now twenty minutes of twelve," he said, slowly. "At twelve I have my lunch hour. I think I'll ask the boss to let me off a little early. I gave him a splendid idea this morning, and he should be very grateful."

The Human Cog in the Machine

With a nod of the head he left Fanny on the sidewalk and sought the head shipping clerk.

Mr. Kittles had been with the firm thirty years and, as head shipping clerk, was now enjoying thirty dollars a week pay with two weeks' vacation. In the score and ten years of his service he had dragged himself up from eight dollars a week as a boy to thirty as a wan and middle-aged, faithful toiler. His hair was sparse and gray, his cheek bones jutted out, covered with skin of parchment color. He had rheumatism and his very bones seemed to squeak.

The head shipping clerk had played safety all his life, nursing his job. The one big tragedy always before him was the prospect of losing his place. To have murdered him in his tracks would have been more merciful than to have taken his job from him. He had grown into the business, submerged himself in it, lost himself in it and could not have proved a farthing's worth to any other employer. All that he knew was the business of Hart & Shafter, wholesale grocers.

Never a thought out of the routine entered his mind. He was a cog in a piece of machinery. To Jimmie he was a great stone barrier between him and vast success. Kittles always listened to his ideas and forgot them. He would run no chances.

"Mr. Kittles," began Jimmie as the head shipping clerk worked over his table of shipments.

"Yes, go on," half whispered Mr. Kittles, expecting another idea.

Mr. Kittles Scents a Romance.

"Mr. Kittles," resumed Jimmie, "I would like a few extra moments to my lunch hour to-day. A young lady, who is my affianced bride, has called on me for advice."

"My!" exclaimed Mr. Kittles, peering over steel-rimmed glasses and the ghost of a smile coming to his thin, clean-shaven face.

"Yes," Jimmie informed him. "As soon as business conditions are better I shall become a benedict."

"You say she is here?" asked Mr. Kittles.

"At the door, waiting for Mr. Gilley."

"Might I see her, Jimmie?"

"Certainly."

Jimmie led Mr. Kittles to the door, where he could get a glimpse of Fanny.

"My, my, my," mused Mr. Kittles. "What a pretty girl. Why, of course, Jimmie, you may start to lunch early. Run right along. What a pretty girl."

He returned to his work with funny little squeaks of pleasure and chuckles over the romance he had [illegible] into [illegible] of thirty years of [illegible] to see himself as a young man in love.

"Now, kid," announced Jimmie as he took Fanny by the arm, "we shall have lunch; how much money have you with you?"

"Ten," replied Fanny.

"Oh, that is an abundance."

"Cents," said Fanny.

Jimmie's pose of grandeur and proprietorship disappeared.

"F'r the love of Mike," he protested, as he began fumbling in his pockets.

"How much have you?" asked Fanny.

They stopped on the corner while Jimmie explored all the pockets of his neatly pressed but well worn suit.

Two dimes, three nickels and six pennies were fished out.

"I guess we'll cut out the taxicab," he said, solemnly; "also it might be best not to telephone to the St. Regis for a table."

Desperate Desmond

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

VILLAIN DESMOND, SOON AS YOUR FEET GET TIRED AND DROP, YOU WILL PULL THE TRIGGER THAT WILL END YOUR FIENDISH CAREER, YOU CUR!
MY FEET ARE GETTING TIRED, BUT I WILL FOIL THE LOVERS CLAUDE AND ROSAMOND YET. SHE MUST BE MY WIFE. HERE COMES A SNAKE!
HA, HA! THE SNAKE HAS DECIDED TO COIL UNDER MY FEET. I CAN REST NOW
A BALL OF TWINE! THE SNAKE IS SCARED AWAY, BUT I'LL REST ON THE ROLL INSTEAD
THE BALL OF TWINE HAS FALLEN TO THE HILLS BELOW. LUCKY I HUNG ON TO THIS KITE STRING. I'LL HAVE TO REWIND FROM THIS END.
CURSES! THERE GOES THE LAST OF THE TWINE AND I'M IN THE SAME FIX AS BEFORE. CURSES, BUT I'LL ESCAPE AND FOIL THE LOVERS YET. CURSES!
HERSHFIELD

Ever try to see how long you could keep your feet up in the air? Well, take Desmond's advice—even if he is a villain—and don't try. It hurts. In Desmond's case he had to keep his trotters pointed skywards, or he would have pulled the trigger of the gun and killed himself. It is a trying form of physical culture, but Desmond has brought it upon himself.

Crawling along the desert comes a large snake. Desmond looks at the repulsive creature almost with friendship, for he himself is a human snake. Although there is no apparent way of obtaining relief for his tired legs through the advent of a snake, nevertheless the presence of the reptile somehow cheers Desmond and gives him hope that he may yet escape with his worthless life.

Also in the scene comes a harmless little frog hopping innocently over the sand in search perhaps of some tiny pond where it may disport itself. The baleful eye of the snake rests upon the little frog and the snake coils itself neatly preparatory to a sudden dart upon its prey. This is Desmond's opportunity. With a sigh of relief he rests his weary legs on the coils of snake.

But, in this case anyway, there is no rest for the wicked. Just as Desmond is settling his legs on the snake, it uncoils and undulates away, frightened by a huge ball of twine which has come rolling down a declivity. However, the villain soons finds that the string makes even a better resting place for his feet than did the snake, and now he thinks he can hold out.

Far away in the hills, "Little Philip," the schoolboy who has been in search of his sister Rosamond, is flying his kite, and it was his ball of twine that rolled away. With a slight exclamation of impatience, the lad begins his laborious task of rewinding from his end that long string which was to have given his kite the altitude record for Tripoli, a coveted honor among youngsters.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "but I'm getting cramps!" No wonder, for as Philip rewound the ball of twine, the support to Desmond's legs grew less and less and finally disappeared altogether, leaving the villain again in the same desperate position as he occupied at the opening of the chapter. Can he endure the awful strain much longer? To-morrow's pictures will tell.

Stops a Cough Quickly --Even Whooping Cough

A Whole Pint of the Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy for 50c. Money Refunded if It Fails.

If you have an obstinate, deep-seated cough, which refuses to be cured, get a 50-cent bottle of Pinex, mix it with home-made sugar syrup and start taking it. Inside of 24 hours your cough will be gone, or very nearly so. Even whooping-cough is quickly conquered in this way.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, gives you a pint—a family supply—of the finest cough remedy that money could buy, at a clear saving of $2. Very easy to prepare —full directions in package.

Pinex soothes and heals the inflamed membranes with remarkable rapidity. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative, and has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. Splendid for croup, asthma, bronchitis, throat tickle, chest pains, etc., and a thoroughly successful remedy for incipient lung troubles.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other healing pine elements. It has often been imitated, though never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a pint bottle, and it is ready for use.

Anyone who tries Pinex will quickly understand why it is used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist Pinex or will get it for you. A Romance Founded On a Deep Mystery

BARING was struck to dumbness by this story of a woman's love, a woman's devotion so simply told.

Kitty amazed him all the more when she told him of her desire to go away from the world, too—to enter the life of a cloistered nun.

"Kitty, I would rather see you dead at my feet—here—now," he said "than know for my eternal hurt that you were immured in the living death of a convent"——

"Don't be ridiculously melodramatic." Kitty gave a faint laugh. "It's one of the best lives in the world—it's the most extraordinary alive life that anyone can live—face to face with the eternal verities—all the curtains torn down. I should be happy enough at the thought but for the knowledge that it's only a maimed, soiled life that I have to give." . . .

Baring gave a sudden, quick laugh.

"Kitty—Kitty! It isn't true. I need you—I can't do without you."

She caught the outstretched hands in her own and drew them for a moment against her breast.

"Laurence, dear—I have no love to give you—I had—I never could have. Don't you understand—try to understand—I have treated you badly—I ask your pardon for that. Be generous—give it—and go away."

There was pleading now in her voice, pleading that went straight home to Baring's heart, in spite of himself. He raised his eyes and met hers.

"I can never understand—but I can always love you," he said.

His lips touched her hands. The next moment the soft closing of the door told Kitty she stood alone, her boats burned behind her, on the further brink of this unknown shore.

* * * *

It was John Martindale's last day in England.

He sat at breakfast with Father Armstrong and the young priest, Father Phillips, who was accompanying them.

His last day in England; his last day in the same country with the woman he loved, the woman who had stood aside and bid him go—the woman who had written the letter that lay now against his breast.

Kitty's Letter

Father Armstrong rose from the table, said his grace and pushed back his chair.

"I want you to give me half an hour, if you will, Phillips," he said. His hand was on the young priest's shoulder, but his eyes were on Martindale. He had seen the letter from Wyndfiete * * * he had himself received one—very brief, very poignant. He knew the imperative desire Martindale must have for solitude.

The Colonni, the ship on which they were to sail, would not leave the Mersey till evening.

Martindale, thus left alone, opened Kitty's letter. It was long and closely written. As Martindale unfolded it that delicate scent that seemed a very part of the woman's self, stole out from the pages.

The first letter she had ever written to him as his wife—the last she would ever write.

"Jack * * * to give you Godspeed" * * * Her voice seemed to sound in the room as he read on.

Kitty, who loved life * * * who lived every moment of her life in a sense in which few people understand the meaning of the word, was "not going to die, because, my dear," because "for all my cowardice, I find I am not so great a coward." but going to become— "if God gives me the strength to do something worth while at last with my life," a Poor Clare—a nun—not an ordinary Sister of Charity, whose bustling life of good works is passed in the world, but a nun of the enclosed order.

Facing Temptation

Kitty * * * passionate, wayward—life-loving Kitty. It wasn't possible. It was monstrous * * *

He checked the words on his lips with an effort and looked around the bare room like a man suddenly roused from a dream — with eyes that held a certain dread lest some stranger might perchance have looked straight down into his naked soul. The sweat dropped from his face in little drops—he put up his hand amazedly to wipe this moisture away.

Only, just for a moment in that bare lodging house room old fierce temptations flashed into being. The old sophistries to which he had surrendered in Africa whispered and gibed about him.

"The unborn To-morrow and dead Yesterday, why fret about them if to-day be sweet? Go back and claim the woman who is yours by every earthly right. For what are you giving up? Fool! Your reward is neither here nor there."

Kitty, to know the warmth of her yielding body against his own, the touch of her lips, to feel his fingers lose themselves again in the scented masses of her wonderful hair!

Kitty and love—by what was he replacing them? The arid future—Africa, toil, disappointment, the inglorious fever death —and after?

His grasping fingers found the crucifix he wore, pressed its roughness close against his breast.

"He that taketh not up his cross and followeth Me is not worthy of Me. He that findeth his life shall lose it. He that loseth his life for Me shall find it."

He stopped and picked up the fallen sheets of his wife's letter, and read them through to the end.

She had written in no moment of hysterical exaltation. He could have no doubt on that point.

On the Way

"When Father Armstrong had mentioned 'the veil' as a way out," she wrote, "every prejudice in my heart cleaved together as a whole, and I cried out a furious protest; and yet, even while I protested I had a curious feeling, like that of a young girl who struggles against the kiss of her first lover, while every fibre of her being is fainting in surrender. * * * I longed to yield. I saw everything—with a clearness that was dazzling. The life before you—the priesthood that was to be the ultimate fulfilment and development of your true nature. . . . Jack, if there had been children, it would have been utterly different. I understand now why God held back that gift for which I had prayed."

The pages trembled in Martindale's grasp; he read on: "But now I want you to realize that I am quite extraordinarily happy * * * when, by every canon in life I ought to be gripped fast in the black embrace of despair. Jack—I don't know how to express myself—but instinct tells me you will understand. Here, now, when I have given you up. When I know beyond all possibility of doubt that never in this world will I see your face again, you seem to belong to me with an utter certainty that I never knew before, that passeth words or understanding."

He understood, God help him, he understood. He crushed the pages of the letter in his hand; as he stood there he pressed them savagely against his lips, the crushed paper on which her hand had rested. * * *

"John * * *" A faint tap on the door and the voice of the old priest speaking his name. "May I enter, John?"

Martindale, with the letter crushed in his hand, went to the door and threw it open.

"There has been some mistake as to tides," Father Armstrong said. "The Colonni leaves the Mersey about 2 instead of 6. Can you be ready or can I assist you?"

"I am ready now," Martindale said, and smiled.

The mission station for which the party of three was bound lay to the north of Messala, the Saxes' old home, considerably further inland than that station from which Father Armstrong had been journeying when he had come upon that scene by an open grave, and walked out of the dim aisles of the tropical forest into the lives of the man and woman in whose destinies he was to play so important a part.

Martindale, studying the route in the privacy of his cabin, had learned to know it very well; had learned to face one fact which the old priest appeared to have overlooked, that on the march up the country they would, for a time, follow the identical route by which he had travelled from Omdura up-country with John Saxe and his wife—and, in the fulness of time, must reach that forest clearing where once he had seen a man and a woman standing together by an open grave.

Awoke From Dreams

On board ship the thought was ghastly enough; he awoke at night from dreams in which he had fought with the green tangling growth of the forest as with some hideous, living octupus, fighting to wrest that burial place clear of the covering spread about it by the busy green hands of the forest; yet in the day-time, with the bustle of shipboard life about him, it had been possible to shake himself free of the obsession. After they had landed it seemed to settle down upon him, overshadowing him like a pall.

At last they had landed and were on the way. The forest that he had dreaded on that former journey seemed at first to Martindale like a friend. It shook him into its green, shadowy embrace with a kindly, sheltering welcome. But only at first. As the march led them deeper into the heart of the forest, the thickening trees, laced and interlaced by their swinging screens of creepers, seemed to close in on him stiflingly, like the walls of a prison.

Here, almost on this identical spot, had stood John Saxe's tent; here he had sent the madman to his death, and here Kitty had formulated her mad plan * * * He forced himself to face fact after fact, every detail of that night, and they came at his bidding the memories, pale phantoms as of a half-forgotten dream.

One night Father Armstrong said to him:

"I seem to feel that death is coming to me with a release that but for you two children of mine would be sweet enough. But as your needs—so will my days and my strength be. I know that, too. It's instinct—I can't explain it. Only —time will show."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

SHARP RISE IN LEHIGH STOCK

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Lehigh Valley was the most conspicuous stock on the list at the opening of the stock market to-day, advancing from 181⅛ to 184 within fifteen minutes, a gain of 2⅞ points. Buying of this stock was vigorous in many quarters.

The market maintained the strong tone it had shown yesterday, and gains were made throughout the list. United States Steel common gained ⅜, going to 69¾, this being the highest this issue has touched in several months. Traders said that much of the buying was for investment, the public being influenced by optimistic business predictions for 1912.

The copper stocks were all in good demand. Utah advanced ⅜ and both Amalgamated and Anaconda made gains of ½. Reading rose ⅛ to 153⅜. Canadian Pacific gained ½. Fractional gains were also scored in Erie common and preferred, American Smelter, Southern Railway and Atchison.

The curb was quiet and steady. Americans in London and Canadian Pacific were strong on support.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

So many expressions of confidence were made on New Year's Day by leading authorities that there was really considerable investment buying and the professional traders decided it was not the time to stay short of stocks.

$ $ $

The principal feature of the demand for securities in the new year has been the large purchases of notes by institutions. This was particularly true in the case of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas notes, which advanced half a point.

$ $ $

At the end of every year banking as well as other institutions in making up their balance sheets for the year just ended go over their lists of investments and clean out small parcels of securities here and there that have been held for years. All these securities are sold for cash and the aggregate usually amounts to quite an accumulation of funds. As most of this money has been received from dormant securities, it is only natural that the heads of the institutions should go to the other extreme and put the money into high-grade securities. That is what the market for notes is now reflecting.

$ $ $

Europe was a buyer of stocks, principally of Steel common. The discussion regarding the steel trade has induced several important banking firms to send experts out to investigate. Reports coming from these experts indicate that the improvement is genuine, and they confirm all that has been said by officials of the trust. It is true the profit per ton is very small, but direction is more important than distance.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Automobile shows are being held in Lynn and Salem this week and are attracting considerable attention. Many of the leading cars of the year are placed on exhibition, and according to all accounts some most excellent business is being transacted in both shows.

These cities have been somewhat advanced in their actions and antedate by some few days at least the big New York show which opens on Saturday evening next.

* * *

The entries for the French Grand Prix show that the contest is to be more restricted in nationalities than ever before. The French and British have most of the entries in the race for all cars, with the Ford as the sole American representative.

There was some talk of the National and Mercer sending over teams, but that was not regarded here as at all likely to happen, and so it proved when it came down to a question of facts.

* * *

On February 10 to 17 inclusive, Atlanta's second automobile show will be held by the Atlanta Automobile and Accessory Association, an organization of local dealers and general agents and southern branch managers, on a co-operative, non-profit-making basis.

The exhibitors will underwrite the expenses by their payments for space, and will receive their refund from the revenues, any surplus in the latter going into the association treasury.

The show will be held in the city's big auditorium, free use of which has been granted for the occasion. It was in that building that the Atlanta national show of November, 1909 was held.

* * *

The first Franklin motor cars built under the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Company's new "No-Yearly-Model" policy to arrive in this city have been received by the Franklin Motor Car Company of No. 31 Irvington street, the Franklin dealer in this city.

The new Franklin cars are not of 1912 model, the last to receive annual designation being those of 1911. The cars just received are a model G touring car and two G runabouts.

In discussing the Franklin line Mr. O. A. Lawton said:

"The models themselves are what might be termed the last word in motor construction. They are par excellence. All the distinguishing features found in previous models have been retained, and are supplemented by the latest motor contrivances, and in fact have everything which go toward making the perfect car."

VAIL OPPOSES U. S. CONTROL

"I consider the danger point has been passed in the United States on the question of government ownership of public utilities—especially telegraph, telephone and railroad lines," declares Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the Western Union Telegraph Company, which in combination constitute the greatest communication trust in the world.

President Vail's declaration was inspired by a cablegram from London relating to the taking over by the British government of all the private telephone lines in the United Kingdom and making them a part of the government's system.

The government for years has owned and operated the entire telegraph system of the United Kingdom through its post-office department. It has also owned and operated a telephone system in competition with the private system which it has just absorbed. According to the latest statistics available, the consolidation places in the hands of the government less than 650,000 telephones.

Deficit in Telegraph Service.

"That number," said President Vail, "just about equals the number of telephones owned and operated by our company in Greater New York alone. We have in operation in the whole country about six million telephones. Other companies own and operate between one and two million. So we have altogether about five times as many telephones as are now under British ownership and control.

"Ours is growing rapidly all the time, while there is no notable growth in Great Britain. The American Telephone & Telegraph Company is capitalized at $600,000,000, the capitalization represented by the British telephone lines is less than $100,000,000. The service in this country returns fair dividends. If government ownership of telephone lines in Great Britain pans out no better than has government ownership of telegraph lines, the British treasury will have to make good a heavy annual deficit.

"Last year, for example," President Vail went on, "according to the British Postmaster-General's report, there was a deficit of $5,000,000 on account of the telegraph service. The deficit was paid from the general revenues of the empire. Every man, woman and child in the United Kingdom had to contribute in some form of taxation to this deficit. But what proportion of the men, women and children of the United Kingdom used the telegraph service even once during the year? It would be interesting to know, because then we would have an excellent object lesson in the cost to the people of government ownership.

Not a Government Function.

"Should the government take over the telegraph and telephone lines in the United States, I believe it would not be long before the American people would be clamoring for their return to private ownership. The masses in no country use either the telephone or the telegraph. It is only that class who can afford the convenience of this means of quick intercommunication. But government ownership would distribute the burden of the cost of maintenance alike on all classes.

"The management or operation of such utilities is not a proper function of government. All that government should do is to see to it that every one of its citizens shall get impartial justice and be protected in his business rights. When that is done government has discharged its duty. But when it ventures into the field of managing the people's business it invariably distributes the burden of taxation inequitably. Government regulation and supervision, intelligently applied, is all right, but ownership, control and operation are all wrong."

MISS QUIMBY TELLS OF TRY TO KILL HER

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Miss Harriet Quimby, the airwoman, who flew in Mexico, has returned here with exciting stories of experiences in flying over mining settlements. At one place she swept out over a mining camp where anti-American sentiment was high. She saw a man come from a shack with a rifle, take aim at her craft and fire. The bullet hit only a wing and simply perforated the cloth, causing no damage.

How Success Looks to Failure

The Greatest Waste of Time is Trying to Make Yourself BIGGER by Trying to Make Others SMALLER

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

There are almost as many kinds of success in this world as there are kinds of men.

And there are almost as many kinds of envious FAILURES as there are kinds of men.

One great curse of human life is waste of energy. That means waste of time, and time is the only thing we really possess here.

To begin with, envy dwarfs and dries up the soul. It kills ambition.

Whereas honest admiration of good work is an INCENTIVE. It develops and gives strength to all of the ambitions.

The truth is that there is in the long run no SUCH THING in this world as "LUCK."

There are men that inherit money. There are men that stumble on gold mines, perhaps; there are thieves that successfully steal other men's ideas and wear them. But those are not men of SUCCESS. They are accidents without meaning.

This article against ENVY is published not because the envy hurts THE SUCCESSFUL MAN, but because it embitters, degrades and keeps back the man that is envious.

There are in history men of actual ability whose entire lives have been thrown away because of their bitter hatred and constant wasted effort aimed at some one man's success.

Parents should remember that this vice of envy begins too often in very early childhood.

Nothing is more important than to teach the child or the young man or woman to take a generous, noble view of another's success or prosperity.

And nothing is more important than to keep children and young people as far as possible away from associations which breed envy in them.

It is bad for the very young to associate with those much poorer than themselves. FOR THAT MAKES THEM FOOLISHLY CONCEITED, and foolish conceit is about as bad as bitter envy.

It is bad for the very young to be allowed to go with those very much richer, more prosperous and more showy than themselves, for where envy once creeps in and establishes itself as a chronic condition the outlook is bad for complete development of the spirit.

One of the richest men in America said to the writer: "I have a young son, and I realize that the rich man's greatest problem is TO KEEP HIS BOY FROM BEING MADE INTO A CONCEITED FOOL ALMOST BEFORE HE IS OLD ENOUGH TO TALK. My servants are already quarrelling as to which shall flatter my child most foolishly."

The case of this rich man's son was probably even more serious than he imagined.

On the other hand, the poor man may well worry about the effect on his child of the ostentation, the show and the bragging of richer children among whom the child may be thrown.

Happy the boy brought up with those of his own condition! And happiest of all those whose parents, rich or poor, have brains enough to make their children live modestly, think modestly, neither exaggerating the importance of wealth nor looking with anything but respect and friendship upon the lesser possessions of the poor.

A habit in the mind once formed is hardly ever lost. And there is no commoner habit, unfortunately, than that of indiscriminate envy and bitterness of criticism.

Francis Bacon, greatest philosophical mind since Aristotle, said of envy:

> "It is also the vilest affectation, and the most depraved; for which cause it is the proper attribute of the devil, who is called 'The envious man, that soweth tares amongst the wheat by night'; as it always cometh to pass that envy worketh subtilely, and in the dark, and to the prejudice of good things, such as is the wheat."

Do you not realize from your own experiences in life what bitter force is used up when envy and bitterness fill the mind?

Among writers, newspaper men, politicians, business men, how many hours of thought and talk are wasted IN DECRYING THE REAL WORK OF OTHERS?

The real man for his own good should be too busy to think of what others are doing, unless it be to look with admiration occasionally at the successful and say, "I am glad he has done so well. I shall try to be like him."

Do we not all know instinctively, as soon as we hear a man praise another freely and highly, that the man who praises IS HIMSELF ON THE RIGHT TRACK?

And do we not all know that the man criticising, attacking, belittling real effort is small and growing smaller?

To men and women that are grown up we would say, don't build up imaginary luck monkeys. THEY DO NOT EXIST.

If you see a man or woman successful, be GLAD of it. Don't waste envy belittling their success. Use up your force trying to EQUAL it.

To parents we would say, teach your children TO ADMIRE INSTEAD OF ENVYING. Teach them that next to doing a good thing themselves the best quality is to admire frankly and honestly the good thing that a playmate or a fellow worker has done.

Admiration and praise are EXPANSIVE FORCES. They open the mind and develop it.

Envy is a contracting, bitter power. It is a biting acid that eats up the spirit by which it is produced.

Climb up the Hill of Success as far as you can get. Try your best, do your best. If you can't get quite to the top yourself, praise the man who does get there. AND GIVE HIM A HAND UP IF YOU CAN.

GROUCHO, I'VE RESOLVED NOT TO USE THE LITTLE HAMMER IN THE NEW YEAR!
AND I, KNOCKO, INTEND TO KEEP MY TEMPER UNDER CONTROL!
1
THAT'S THE WORST OLD FASHIONED HAT I EVER SAW!
YOU IDIOT! - I'VE A GOOD MIND TO THRASH YOU!
2
WELL, TIGHTWADDO, THIS YEAR I'M GOING TO BE THE BOSS IN MY FAMILY!
GOOD, HENPECKO! SOME FOLKS SAY I'M STINGY. THEY'LL SEE ME LOOSEN UP IN 1912!
1
GREAT SCOTT, TIGHTWADDO - HERE COMES MY WIFE - TAKE HER HOME IN THE TROLLEY, SO I CAN BEAT IT!
BUT THAT'LL COST ME A DIME!
2
THE CRIMINALS WILL BE SAFE IN 1912, WATSO - I'VE RESOLVED TO ABANDON SLEUTHING - TOO MUCH STRAIN ON THE NERVES!
YES, SHERLOCKO, AND I HAVE DECIDED TO RESUME MY MEDICAL PRACTISE!
1
BLACK PETE'S FOOTPRINTS! I KNOW BY THE PATCH ON THE RIGHT FOOT. HURRY WATSO, WE'LL RUN DOWN HIS GANG!
RELY ON MY ASSISTANCE, SHERLOCKO!

DR. PARKHURST'S ARTICLE

THE SECRET OF HEALTH AND LONG LIFE

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

THE advanced age at which John Bigelow died raises again the old question as to the secret of long life.

It would seem that what kills one man keeps another man alive. Mr. Bigelow attributed his long life to abstinence from whiskey and tobacco. His friend, only two years his junior, explained his by his habitual use of them.

Some consider that health is dependent on a large amount of exercise. Mr. Bigelow told me some time since, that all the exercise he took was to walk around the block once a day and turn over twice during the night.

Another gentleman, born in '42, I heard say recently that he attributed his healthy condition to the fact that he fasted three times a day and took no exercise. By fasting he meant rising from the table with an appetite as good as when he sat down.

We have learned from the English that the way to live long and well is to take a daily "tub." There are symptoms of a reaction against such severe practice of ablution, and an old gentleman, hale and hearty, and quite far on in years, belittled the habit of incessant scrubbing and averred that so far as he knew his father and mother never washed.

Even the Best Machinery Must Be Given Good Care.

From all this variety of opinion and practice it would seem that there are influences determining the length of life which are quite independent of all such habits and usages as have just been named.

Now, some clocks will run only twenty-four hours without winding. Others are good for a week, a year, or even three years. The length of time that they will continue ticking and striking is determined by the way they are built. It is a matter of the particular constitution that the clockmaker gives them.

Something of the kind is true of the human body. Each body has wrought into it the length of time that it will last. Of course, it can be to such extent tampered with as to defeat its constitution. The man built to live till he is ninety can take arsenic and go off at forty. But, even so, he was furnished with an outfit for fourscore and ten.

Nevertheless, even the best machinery wants good care. A clock built to run three years has to go to the jeweler's sometimes and be cleaned, and will fall short of its destiny if its bearings are left unlubricated and if not handled with some consideration and gentleness.

THIS is the season of the year when people do some of their best thinking—thinking about themselves, I mean—taking an inventory of themselves in something the same way that dealers take account of stock.

We Look Backward and Try to Look Forward, Which Is Not So Easy.

New Year's seems to be a kind of jumping-off place; at any rate, it is a break in the road or a way station where the train stops long enough for passengers to alight and look about. We look backward and try to look forward, which is not so easy.

Foresight does not come natural to us. It is like entering a railroad tunnel, all smoke and darkness.

There creeps into the mind a feeling of uncertainty, such as comes to one when skating on thin ice who wonders whether the ice is going to bear him up, how cold the water is and how deep.

One thought that a man has at such a time is how much he is good for and whether he is good for anything; whether aside from the fact that he adds to the census rolls and brings our reputation by so much nearer to the hundred million figure he counts as an asset or as a liability. All men belong to one or other of these two classes, for, even if we do no actual harm, we are a drag on the world unless we do some actual work. There are no neutrals.

Even if we do not put blocks in the way of the wagon wheels we do very much the same thing if we climb into the wagon and travel as freight instead of serving as draught power.

Small Niches Need to Be Filled as Well as the Big Ones.

It is not necessary to be discouraged because we cannot do as much as somebody else. Smal niches need to be filled as well as big ones.

The Italian gravel shoveler and railroad builder contributes to twentieth century civilization.

There is more said in Scripture about the generosity of the widow and her two mites than about all the rest of the givers in Hebrew history. This is not a sermon. It is only a suggestion.

It is a matter to think about when we stand straining our eyes toward the future.

GIVE

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner.

GIVE, and thou shalt receive. Give thoughts of cheer,
Of courage and success to friend and stranger,
And from a thousand sources, far and near,
Strength will be sent thee in thy hour of danger.

II.

Give words of comfort, of defence, and hope,
To mortals crushed by sorrow and by error,
And though thy feet through shadowy paths may grope,
Thou shalt not walk in loneliness and terror.

III.

Give of thy gold, though small thy portion be.
Gold rusts and shrivels in the hand that keeps it;
It grows in one that opens wide and free.
Who sows his harvest is the one who reaps it.

IV.

Give of thy love, nor wait to know the worth
Of what thou lovest; and ask no returning.
And wheresoe'er thy pathway leads on earth
There thou shalt find the lamp of love-light burning.
